NEITHER SIDE CAN CONQUER

THOUGHTFUL CUBANS BELIEVE TROUBLE WILL CONTINUE INDEFINITELY.

INSURRECTION GROWING CONSTANTLY UNPREJUDICED LOOK TO UNITED STATES FOR RELIEF.

HAVANA, Sept. 1.—"Neither side can whip the other," is the concise statement now heard everywhere in Havana and it may also be fairly construed to be the growing conviction of thoughtful persons throughout the island. In Havana, at least, this conviction has led among all unprejudiced persons to expressions of an ardent hope that the prerogative of the Platt amendment will soon be utilized by the United States for the purpose of effectually putting an end to a condition that everybody believes is otherwise bound to grow more and more intolerable.

Nobody appears to believe that the insurgents will take Havana, although this is not regarded as impossible, especially when it is considered that cooperation in such a movement assuredly would come from within. Everybody concedes that the government troops can continue their record of victories in almost all open fights with the insurgents, but how the government, with the forces now at its command, and in view of the small number of enlistments, ever can prevail against its enemies who, fight in the same old guerrilla way, is a conundrum which nobody pretends to solve.

That the insurrection is growing constantly is undeniably evidenced every day, and the decree of pardon recently extended by the government has brought no appreciable change in the situation.

One of the few Americans who joined the insurgent ranks came into Havana tonight. He has been a farmer in Cuba for several years past and, presumably is a reliable source of information. He informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that the 15,000 insurgents now south of Artemisa in scattered parties shortly will concentrate with others from the vicinity of Guanajay with the intention of capturing both Artemisa and Guanajay, and holding the entire width of eastern Pinar Del Rio province. They will thus control the situation far better than did the Rio Verde in the days of the January troubles, and at precisely the same point. The insurgents already have Cabanas and Port Hamilton on the north coast of Pinar Del Rio province, and according to conservative statements they have 75 per cent of the people of that district with them.

Vice President Mendes Capote, who is reported to be at odds with President Palma concerning the conduct of the war, and who is also alleged to favor a compromise with the rebels by giving them a share in the patronage and participation in the cabinet, said tonight:

"I have been maliciously charged with various crimes during the last fortnight, including conspiracy. You may emphatically deny all such falsehoods. I am with the president in everything he undertakes and intend to co-operate with him in crushing this disturbance. My relations with him have always been cordial, and the reported quarrel is absolutely untrue.

"I was at the seashore, 24 hours outside the reach of the news, when the rebellion broke out. Immediately upon receiving word I notified President Palma that I would return and arrived in Havana one day later. The vice president has no active executive functions when the senate is in recess, and my activity necessarily is limited to placing myself under the president's orders.

"I believe the United States will be only too pleased to see us solve our difficulties," added Senor Mendes Capote. "I do not believe that country is anxious for a pretext for occupation. I have perfect confidence in a fair interpretation of the Platt amendment by President Roosevelt."

The situation in eastern Cuba is better than reported Friday night.

Matanzas is comparatively quiet. Large bands of insurgents continue to roam in Havana province.

Pino Guerrera's forces in Pinar Del Rio have divided into small parties and are eluding the troops with the utmost ease, while constantly watching their movements. Guerrera himself camped today near Cayuco.

Business throughout the island is practically dead, and no persons more earnestly hope for American intervention than the Spanish merchants. Many Cubans have a similar desire, but this is tempered with pride.

A few leaders of both political parties suggested this evening as a solution of the trouble that the senators and representatives sign an agreement that a special session of congress shall pass acts granting amnesty to the rebels, providing for municipal elections within 60 days and a new general election today providing minority representation in all branches of the national and municipal governments.

ENGINEER G. R. FREY IS KILLED IN WRECK ON THE BURLINGTON

WRAY, Colo., Sept. 1.—A wreck occurred today on the Burlington passenger train No. 2 at Schramm, 24 miles west of here. Engineer G. R. Frey was killed, but none of the passengers were injured.

The cause of the wreck is not certainly known, but it is believed that a portion of a freight train broke away from the main train on a switch, and rolled onto the main track just before the [illegible] train arrived and a collision [illegible]

JUSTICE WILL BE METED OUT

DISTRICT ATTORNEY BELL EXPECTED TO CAUSE ARREST OF WRECKERS.

DIRECTORS, OFFICIALS AND CLERKS OF FAILED TRUST COMPANY CALLED BEFORE RECEIVER.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—Justice is to be meted out to the men responsible, with Frank H. Hippie, the suicide president of the Real Estate Trust company, for the collapse of that institution. Announcement was made tonight that the evidence so far unearthed by Receiver Earle had been turned over to District Attorney Bell, who is expected to cause the arrest of the wreckers. The names of the men under suspicion were not made public.

Since his appointment, Receiver Earle has maintained that it could not have been possible for President Hippie to entangle the trust company affairs without the knowledge of others connected with the institution. Acting on this impression, he has been persistent in his efforts to discover evidence of collusion. Directors, officials and clerks of the company were called before Mr. Earle today. It was after 6 o'clock when he concluded this part of his investigation, and then for two hours District Attorney Bell was in Mr. Earle's office.

The announcement that the evidence had been placed in the district attorney's hands followed.

This development came after Mr. Earle had engaged John G. Johnson as counsel, to render an opinion as to the responsibility for the failure of the company.

Among the men who appeared before the receiver were four directors, who are said to have heard President Hippie's heavy loans to Adolph Segal at least several weeks ago. Treasurer North, who was supposed to approve all the loans by the trust company, and Theodore Prosser, the company's real estate officer, who was supposed to approve the mortgages offered by Segal as security for his loans, were also examined.

"The deeper I get into the thing the worse it looks," said Receiver Earle. "The trust funds which had thought intact, have been tampered with and [illegible] taken. But the [illegible] distributed through $29,000 in the bank had in fact, and the [illegible] will not be heavy on any individual."

Mr. Hippie's desk was opened, and in it was found a statement by Horace Hill, the company's auditor, which Mr. Earle says is materially different from the statement Mr. Hill gave him.

PRESENT GERMAN EMPEROR MEDALS

AMERICANS ATTEND GERMAN CELEBRATION AND RECEIVE AWARDS OF ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—The annual parade of troops, in celebration of Sedan day, took place today before Emperor William, on Tempelhof field, in splendid weather. Many Americans, including General Thomas H. Barry and the party of American officers were invited by the emperor to be present at the annual maneuvers.

Ambassador Tower took General Barry to the parade ground in his carriage. Among the other prominent Americans present were Herman Ridder of New York; Charles R. Flint of New York; Major John H. Russell, U. S. A., retired; and Mrs. Osborne of Santa Barbara, Cal.

General Barry and his staff, Lieutenant Commander Willis L. Howard, the naval attache of the American embassy, and several other Americans attended the annual military banquet this evening on invitation of Emperor William. Mr. Blaine, British war secretary, was present.

There was a gala performance at the theater after the dinner. Mr. Francis, at the request of the emperor, arrived at the palace 20 minutes before dinner time in order to present the medals and diplomas awarded to the emperor in recognition of services for the St. Louis exposition.

His majesty expressed his great admiration for the medal and diplomas and praised the design and the execution of the work. He said he would treasure them in the family archives. He also expressed hope that Germany's participation in the exposition not only would increase friendship between the two countries, but promote good feeling between the two nations.

The emperor said he was gratified to learn that the people of the United States took so much interest in him, and regretted that it was impossible for him to visit America. The gold medal presented to the emperor is a massive affair, dealt by Weinman, and struck at the Philadelphia mint. The other medal is bronze and was presented to the press in recognition of her charitable work.

After the dinner Emperor William engaged General Barry and General Duvall in a long conversation.

Mr. Francis will leave here tomorrow for Vienna. He [illegible] an audience with Emperor Francis Joseph between [illegible] September 5 and [illegible]

PANAMA IS ON FRIENDLY TERMS WITH NEIGHBORS

PANAMA ASSEMBLY CONVENES IN PRESENCE OF DIPLOMATIC CORPS AND HEARS MESSAGE.

PANAMA, Sept. 1.—In the presence of the diplomatic corps, including United States Minister Magoon and foreign consular officers, the Panama assembly was convened today. Tomas Arias was elected president of the assembly.

In his message, President Amador said cordial relations exist between Panama and all countries except Colombia, which has not yet recognized the republic. The president said Panama's relations with the canal zone governments are harmonious, due to the tact of Governor Magoon.

The message recommended the creation of two special diplomatic missions to visit Europe and the Latin-American countries to make friends for Panama, and to arrange commercial treaties. The message gave an account of the development in public works instruction, telegraph, etc., and said the sanitary conditions in Panama were superior to those in many cities of the continent. It praised the sanitation work by the American government. The message also recommended special laws to stimulate immigration of agriculturists.

In announcing President Roosevelt's intended visit to the canal zone, President Amador referred to Roosevelt, that indefatigable struggler for humanity's progress and welfare, who has initiated a new era of fraternity and union between the American republics."

VILLAGE OF MANUAL, MEXICO, IS FLOODED

GUANAJUATO, Mexico, Sept. 1.—It is reported here that the village of Manual Doblato has almost been wiped out by floods resulting from the torrential rains. More than 20 houses have collapsed. One old man is reported dead. Communication with the district is interrupted.

THINKS "SHERIDAN" CAN BE SAVED

HONOLULU, Sept. 1.—The effort to float the transport Sheridan at high tide today resulted in failure. A discouraging report comes from the wreck. The steamer is reported to be leaking. The ultimate saving of the vessel is dependent upon weather. The Sheridan is lying in such a position that a southerly storm would quickly smash her on the sharp rocks. According to the statements of passengers who have arrived here, there was much alarm when the Sheridan's steam pipe burst after the vessel stranded. All state rooms were immediately filled with steam and thinking the vessel was afire, the passengers rushed out in their night dresses in great confusion.

Captain Peabody things that the vessel was carried out of her course by a phenomenal current, as her course was set for more than four miles off land. He is confident that the V. [illegible] be [illegible]

BOTH FACTIONS CLAIM VICTORY

INCOMPLETE RETURNS FROM DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES WARMLY CONTESTED.

DOYLE SAYS REGULARS ALREADY CAN COUNT ON 67 VOTES, WHILE BURNS CLAIMS 80 OUT OF 110.

The Democratic primaries for the election of delegates to the county convention, to be held at the county court house, Colorado Springs, Saturday, September 8, were held yesterday, and in several districts were warmly contested. Two tickets were placed in nearly all of the city districts, one by the so-called "regular," or Doyle, faction, and the other by the faction led by James F. Burns, who claims that the method of holding the primaries was irregular and not in accordance with the rules and regulations of the party organization.

With several city precincts to hear from last night, both factions were claiming a signal victory. Chairman William E. Doyle, of the Democratic county committee, said that the returns indicated that the "regulars" would have a safe majority in the county convention. He stated that of the districts reporting, 67 would support him in the convention, and that Burns would probably have 33. Colorado City, Chairman Doyle said, could be counted in the "regular" column, but he made no claim for Manitou. The country districts would be solid for the "regular" ticket, he said.

James F. Burns last night claimed that he would have 80 out of the 110 delegates elected in the city precincts. He said that Manitou would be solid for his ticket, and that the country districts were doubtful. Mr. Burns was elected a delegate from his precinct, where there was a lively contest, by a majority of 2 votes.

The hottest contests of the day took place in Precinct 2 of the Fifth ward, and in Precinct 3 of the Fourth ward. In the former precinct the vote stood: Doyle ticket, 55; Burns ticket, 20. In the third precinct of Ward 4 the vote was: Doyle ticket, 53; Burns, 16. No figures were given out for the other districts.

Protests were filed with Chairman Doyle last night, setting forth that the method of holding the primaries was irregular. Robert Jardine and William F. Jardine were the signers of the protest from Ward 1, Precinct 4, and S. T. Johnson and O. H. Hill that from Ward 5, Precinct 2. It was asserted that it was probable that a protest would be filed from every precinct.

Following is the list of delegates elected at the primaries, as far as reported last night:

First Ward—Precinct 1: A. C. Patrick, P. A. Morath; Precinct 2, James F. Burns, Roscoe Ady; Precinct 3, John Quick, W. C. Dailey, J. C. Hall.

INDIGNANT AT M'CABE LETTER

POLICYHOLDERS' COMMITTEE SAYS BISHOP KNOWS ABSOLUTELY NOTHING OF ITS AFFAIRS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—The letter written by Isaac Parker as chairman of the New York committee of the international policyholders' committee appointed by Bishop Charles C. McCabe of the Methodist Episcopal church, which has been the cause of some of the actions of the committee and officials of the committee before the stockholders' meeting of both the Mutual and New York Life Insurance companies, was [illegible] by the committee.

Immediately following the receipt of the letter a telegram was sent to the bishop asking him if he had signed the letter or merely authorized it.

At the headquarters of the international policyholders committee no reply was received from Bishop McCabe.

A statement given out by Mr. Scrugham, organization manager of the committee, says that if Bishop McCabe had attended the meetings of the committee, or the executive committee, or if he had in any way informed himself of its painstaking work he would not have criticised the form of the address or the labors of the committee. Mr. Scrugham, proceeding, says:

"He cannot possibly know anything about the affairs or the conditions of the companies except such misinformation as he may have received in talks with Mr. Buckner, vice president of the New York Life, and with Mr. Peabody, of the Mutual Life, at whose office this letter was prepared.

It is evident that the bishop knows none of the facts that are in possession of the committee. Is he, for instance, aware that the administration ticket, which he advises his associates to support, has been fooling the policyholders for years? Is he aware that all the vice presidents of the New York Life are part of the old [illegible] under which the policyholders were plundered?

The committee will meet Thursday. Mr. Scrugham says if Bishop McCabe will attend the meeting he will learn much of the work of which he is not now informed.

"HAIL COLUMBIA" GREETS MR. ROOT ON HIS ARRIVAL

PRESIDENT RIESCO, SURROUNDED BY CABINET, RECEIVES AMERICAN GUEST.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Sept. 1.—Secretary of State Elihu Root and party arrived here at 2 o'clock this afternoon and were received by a crowd of 5,000 persons, a detachment of soldiers and bands of music. Secretary Root was driven to his temporary residence in a state coach. The dense crowds which lined the streets kept up continuous cheers for the American diplomat.

In the carriage with Mr. Root were Minister of Foreign Affairs Huneus, Minister of Justice Figuera, and Mr. Hicks the American minister. Mrs. Root was in the second carriage and Miss Root in the third. The party is lodged at the palace-like residence of Mrs. Edwards.

Later Secretary Root drove to the government palace in a state coach, escorted by infantry and cavalry. Here he was given another ovation, the bands playing "Hail Columbia," and the crowds that almost blocked his way cheering him and the United States.

President Riesco surrounded by his cabinet, received Mr. Root and Minister Hicks in the hall of honor. Mr. Root in a speech thanked President Riesco for the cordial reception that had been given him. He deplored the catastrophe which had befallen the country, and wished for brighter days for Chile. President Riesco thanked the American government for sending Mr. Root to visit the country. From the palace Secretary Root returned to his residence, where the party was greeted by 500 persons of social distinction.

From the palace, Secretary Root accompanied by Mrs. Root and Miss Root drove to the residence of Foreign Minister Huneus, where they were greeted by 1,000 persons of social distinction. Secretary Root had declined to visit the races tomorrow on the ground that they are out of character with the nature of his visit. Tomorrow night Mr. Root will dine with President Riesco, and he expects to go to Valparaiso Tuesday and re-embark on the Charleston.

PAYMENT OF POLL TAX IS AN ISSUE

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 1.—A large vote in the biennial election Monday, is indicated by the interest displayed in the campaign, which closed today. State and county officers, including members of the legislature, which is to choose a successor to United States Senator Berry, will be elected. The Democratic state nominees form the only complete ticket in the field, the Republicans, Prohibitionists and Socialists having nominated candidates for governor only. Congressman John S. Little, Democratic nominee for governor, predicts that he will have a plurality of 60,000, which would be a gain of 22,000 over two years ago. There is no opposition to Governor Jefferson Davis, Democratic nominee for United States senator.

The payment of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting is an issue, the Republicans claiming that the poll tax [illegible] to the constitution [illegible]

ARE HOSTILE TOWARD JEWS

RENEWAL OF TERRORISM HAS GREATLY INTENSIFIED FEELING.

REGARDED AS BRAINS OF REVOLUTION, THEY WILL GET SMALL ENLARGEMENT OF RIGHTS.

ST. PETERSBERG, Sept. 1.—The renewal of terrorism on a large scale has greatly intensified the hostility of the ruling classes against the Jews, who long have been regarded as the brains of the revolution, and it is believed has diminished the chances of the Jews obtaining more than a nominal enlargement of their rights.

Every official report of assassination or other crime emphasizes the role played in it by Jews, and the past week saw the launching of two parties, the "national" at St. Petersburg and the "Russian popular party" at Moscow, the principal planks in whose platforms are for the exclusion of Jews from all political activity and from service in the army, the latter to be committed as in the cases of the Tartars and Finns for a money consideration. The Moscow organization proposes to rid the country of Jews by indorsing the Zionist movement and urging the government to assist it.

It is remarkable that amid all the crime, bloodshed and horror with which the country is filled, the music halls and cafes of the capital are thronged nightly by gay crowds. A brother of Premier Stolypin, writing in the Novoe Vremya, calls attention to this weakness of his countrymen who, in the presence of the greatest crisis, he says, think only of pleasure. M. Stolypin says it was always thus in Russia, that officers on the eve of a battle carouse and spend money that would feed starving peasants' families. He calls it the spirit which inspired the orgies of the middle ages, while thousands were dying of the plague.

The only reaction noticeable is the increase in activity of the black hundred organization, [illegible] nationalist, president of the [illegible] known as the "true Russian people," whose life was attempted recently, [illegible] on his following [illegible] his death by the [illegible] section of the [illegible] of the "who are defending the native under the flag of liberty," in case the next attempt is successful.

In the cessation between the government and the revolutionists, the latter, who [illegible] a prominent part in the liberation movement, continue to enact leading roles. Many of them are high born.

Princess Obolenski was arrested today at Rybinsk, near Yaroslav, for participating in a conspiracy.

All eyes are now directed toward the country where within the next few weeks the peasants will have finished the harvest. In the cities the government has demonstrated its ability to hold down the proletariat, and unless the peasants also little beyond individual acts of terrorism are expected this fall. Some [illegible] of agrarian disorders have already been reported, but details are meager.

FIVE MEN SHOT BY INSANE MAN

[illegible] KILLED [illegible] SHOT.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Sept. 1.—August Kruger, a wealthy Pottawattamie county man, went insane suddenly this afternoon at his residence in the town of Hancock. From his front porch he fired a rifle into a crowd of men who were passing, and dangerously wounded Dr. Albert Stevens.

He shot several times, wounding Jesse Crosby, Sid Bottom, Frank Johnson and James Duncan, all well-known residents of Hancock. A mob of citizens organized, armed with revolvers and guns, surrounded Kruger's house and riddled it with bullets. Kruger was shot four times, but not dangerously hurt. The mob went to a hardware store, made a large iron shield, which was fastened to a cart and under cover of this approached the house. The door was broken down and Kruger was overpowered and held until officers arrived.

The recommendations left by Father Martin, concerning the direction and plans of the society were read, and Father Freddi presented the report of his work as vicar.

The congregation met again this evening to continue its preliminary work. BRYAN HAILED WITH CHEERS

THREE CITIES JOIN IN PAYING FINAL TRIBUTES OF WELCOME.

DEMOCRATIC LEADER DELIVERS FIVE ADDRESSES WILL LEAVE FOR NEBRASKA TOMORROW.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Three cities joined today paying the final tributes in the continuous welcome accorded to William J. Bryan since his arrival in New York, Thursday, from his tour around the world.

Returning from Bridgeport this morning, Mr. Bryan, after devoting scant time to personal business, was escorted to the National Democratic club, where an enthusiastic reception was accorded him, and where he spoke briefly. From the club he was escorted by former Senator James Smith and other prominent Democrats to Newark, where he addressed an audience of 10,000 in Military park and afterward held an informal reception, shaking hands with hundreds who crowded around the speaker.

Hailed with cheers as he drove to the railroad station, Mr. Bryan hurried to Jersey City, where he made three addresses and reviewed a parade of the Hudson county Democracy and then returned to New York and finished the day with an informal dinner given in his honor by 200 of the working newspaper men of the metropolis.

Mr. Bryan will rest until tomorrow evening when he will start on his journey home in company with the "home folks" from Nebraska, on their special train. They expect to reach Lincoln on Wednesday, after stops for receptions at Detroit and Chicago.

W. J. Bryan was the guest tonight at dinner given by 200 of the local newspaper men of New York city. The affair was strictly informal, in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Bryan, who stated in his letter of acceptance that he would "just like to sit down with the boys to an old time American dinner." The reception in Jersey City was [illegible] of the day, there was enthusiasm as a consequence Mr. [illegible] his [illegible] the dining room [illegible] at his hotel here, he was met by a committee of the men [illegible] and escorted to the [illegible]

It was after 11 o'clock when he finished the dining [illegible] informal and [illegible] lasted [illegible] Mr. Bryan's [illegible] since as a newspaper man and his relations with other members of the craft.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 1.—W. J. Bryan was given a warm reception here today. The streets were lined and the visitor was cheered continuously. He told his 10,000 auditors that he could speak to them only on time that really belonged to Jersey City.

"But I remember that Essex county gave me a majority of 10,000 in [illegible] so I just had to come to see you," said he, "and I hoped that by coming here I could help a Democrat to be elected to the United States senate over Senator Dryden, and two Democrats to be elected to congress."

Mr. Bryan declared that Republican strength is waning and that the time for Democratic success is not far distant.

"In 1898 they won by a tremendous majority," said he, "and they [illegible] a very respectable [illegible] over us in 1902."

"And they'll do it again, the old game to the light of the [illegible] Instantly half a dozen political [illegible] surrounded the interrupter and were rushing him through the park when Mr. Bryan cried out: "Don't put that man out, officers; don't put him out. He's the man I am trying to reach."

Continuing he said that if a Republican now admit that if a presidential election were to be held at this time they have only one man who could have a chance of success.

"He would have that chance only because he has followed the Democratic platform," said Mr. Bryan. "Roosevelt has not one atom of popularity that he does not owe to the fact that he differs from the party which he leads, and if Roosevelt can become as popular as he is by occasionally doing something Democratic, what would be the popularity of a president who always is a Democrat?"

Mr. Bryan discussed the tariff and the trusts. He said that if the tariff is to be reformed, it must be done by those who believe in tariff reform. He declared that while he is willing to give Republicans credit for what they have done toward the legislation of trusts, they have not yet begun even to "scratch the surface of that scourge."

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—William J. Bryan arrived from Bridgeport this morning and went to the Victoria hotel. After remaining there a short time he left the hotel to attend to some per-

DRUBS HUSBAND IN COURT ROOM

JUDGE ORDERS WOMAN TO PERSONALLY METE OUT PUNISHMENT TO WIFE BEATER.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Ordered by the court to mete out punishment personally Mrs. Emma Belfield took her husband into an anteroom of the hall of justice in Somerville and administered to him a first-class drubbing.

The woman had complained to Justice Mahon, Francis that her husband, Harry Belfield, had made a practice of beating her.

Mrs. Belfield trembled as she contemplated the task imposed upon her by the court. Belfield trembled also. She looked up and the judge pointed to his private chamber. Mrs. Belfield led the way and her spouse followed.

In a minute there were large doings in that room. The racket shook the building, and it is estimated that the woman threw her spouse down, danced on him, pulled his hair, kicked him in the ribs and piled several chairs on him.

When the door was opened, the Belfields came forth, the wife with a smile of triumph on her face and the husband nursing a blue eye. She went home. Her husband followed.

SPIES ON WIFE; NOW HE'S SORRY

PEEPS THROUGH HOLE IN SHUTTER TO KEEP TAB ON ACTIONS OF HIS SPOUSE.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 1.—William Royer, chief lineman of the Interstate Telephone company, has had an experience with a plug of wood he will not forget in a hurry, for it cost him the companionship of his wife and involved him in all sorts of trouble.

The piece of wood was inserted in a hole bored in a shutter of his home here for the purpose of keeping tab on his wife.

Royer is away a great deal of the time, and his wife has been running a boarding house. Hearing tales of her alleged flirtations with one of her boarders, Royer fitted the plug and then went away to Atlantic City for a week on business. He got to thinking about the plug and what he might see if it was removed, and he came home.

He got a peep through the hole in the shutter, and, he alleges, a shock at the same time. Rushing into the house, he took his little daughter out of her bed, dressed her and, packing his things, left the house. His wife says he threatened her with a razor.

Royer went away, and when his wife found that he had taken some of her things she went to a dry goods store and ordering goods equivalent, sent him the bill. Then he refused to pay, and published a notice, saying he would not be responsible for her debts. He forgot that he had deserted her instead of she deserting him.

Now he wants to come back home, and the wife has not yet decided to let him in.

DEATH STROKE RESTORES SIGHT

PARALYSIS RENDERS LONG-DORMANT FACULTY—BLIND MAN ENABLED TO SEE FAMILY AGAIN.

YORK, Pa., Sept. 1.—Even while paralysis in repeated strokes was forming hand Jacob Wrentzler, of Manchester, into his grave, it was tempered with mercy, for the second stroke restored his sight, which had been lost years before.

Thus before dying he had the unhoped-for privilege of seeing once more the faces of his wife and six children. For several days he lived in full possession of his sight, when a final stroke killed him last week.

Wrentzler was 69 years old, and had lived in Manchester many years.

NAMED BOY "SKIDDOO;" WAS BORN AUGUST 23

TOPEKA, Sept. 1.—People from all sections of this country have claimed the distinction of having been the originators of "skiddoo 23" but a proud father in North Topeka claims to have the only "Skiddoo" in existence.

Frank Merriam, who was employed in one of the leading drug stores in North Topeka, is the father of a boy born Thursday, August 23, which has been called George "Skiddoo" Merriam. "Skiddoo" is in good health and it is hoped that he will not be overtaken by bad luck and grow to manhood. Mr. Merriam never claimed the distinction of being the originator of "Skiddoo," but as he has never seen a statement to prove that such a person as "Skiddoo" ever existed, that his son is the only "Skiddoo" in existence.

STATE CONTRIBUTES LARGELY TO UNITED STATES ARMY

DENVER, Sept. 1.—Colorado is giving her young men to the United States navy at the rate of thirty per month, or one every day, according to the report of Lieutenant Commander Wilson, United States navy, who is in charge of several divisions of the recruiting department.

Although the Denver station was established but nine months ago, Lieutenant H. F. Scranton, officer in charge, has made it one of the most successful posts in the country. Lieut. Sam says Lieutenant Scranton is in some need of seamen to man his big, new battleships. Recruiting parties are touring Colorado in order to induce young men to roll the ocean blue in the service of their country.

HEIRESS SEEKING $1,000,000 MINE

AUNT FINDS ESTATE GRANDNEPHEW IS SAID TO HAVE LEFT, BUT ISN'T DISCOURAGED.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—Though the glowing promises handed out daily for a year have not put her within spying distance of the $1,000,000 estate which her grandnephew is said to have left her in mines and railroad property in southern California, Mrs. Charles H. Roberts, 1936 North Leithgow street, has not given up hope, and will soon change the tactics of her campaign.

The fortune is there, she says, and the way to get at it is easy for it and not lose time by writing letters, as has been done for the year. Consequently one of Jacob Heighler's heirs, who have sprung up like mushrooms since the report of his vast estate, will be sent west to demand an accounting.

Old Jacob Heighler disappeared years ago from his home in Lancaster county. A notice of his death appeared in western newspapers, with an addenda that he left to his heirs a $1,000,000 estate. That was a year ago. Since then every effort has been made to locate the Eldorado, but without success.

ALL CITIES TO BE DESTROYED

UNKNOWN SEER SAYS EARTHQUAKE WILL FELL ALL CITIES IN THE YEAR 1982.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Philadelphia, New York, Chicago, Paris, London, St. Petersburg and all the cities of the earth will be destroyed by earthquakes in the year 1982, according to the prophecy made by Edmund S. Stevens, of this city, an unknown seer.

He predicts a long series of awful catastrophes, which will culminate in the wreck of the cities.

Mother Earth is out of plumb, so this prophet declares, and all the terrible earthquakes that have occurred and are yet to come are due to the fact that the earth is gradually righting itself.

When the transition is complete there will be a new earth and a new heaven, and all old things will have passed away, so the prophet declares. He can prove his assertion by an elaborate calculation, based on charts, intelligible to him only. The prophecy is as follows:

"The earth is out of her upright position. She is gradually resuming it. Whenever there is an acceleration or faster motion, earthquakes occur. We are now in one of those periods, from Mount Pelee, 1900 to 1915, again from 1925 to 1946½; again from 1965 to 2000 A. D. In 1982 the earthquakes are of such extent that all the cities of the nations fall. From 2395 to 2444 A. D. the earth is in continual perturbation, and the latter year settles to its upright position. This brings in the new heaven and new earth."

Mr. Stevens declares that he has "grasped the sorry scheme of things entire," which troubled Omar Khayyam, and that he has discovered the secret of the universe.

SCORED ON THE COFFIN TRUST

WOMAN PURCHASES CASKET FOR LIVING RELATIVE TO AVOID ADVANCE IN PRICES.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Sept. 1.—Miss Percy Bogardus has scored what she declares is a big victory over the Coffin trust, when she purchased a coffin for her father, who, although 75 years old, says he has no intention of dying for several years.

Miss Bogardus, who is regarded by her neighbors as a splendid bargain hunter, read in a newspaper that a sharp advance in the price of coffins was to take place soon.

Immediately repairing to an undertaker, she selected a coffin and paid for it. She told the undertaker to deliver the article when called for. Mr. Bogardus, in discussing his daughter's thoughtfulness, remarked:

"Percy always has been a model business woman."

TREPOFF'S CONDITION MUCH IMPROVED

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 1.—Reports are persistently circulated that General Trepoff, commandant of the palace, is so seriously ill that his life is in danger. No statement regarding the nature of his malady has been given out, but it is intimated that it dates back to the time of the recent rumors that an attempt had been made to poison the general.

At the ministry of the court, the Associated Press representative was informed this evening that General Trepoff's condition was not serious. He is suffering from an affection of the heart, which was aggravated during the recent maneuvers at Krasnoye-Selo. The general has been quite ill but is now better.

General Count Grloff, who attained considerable notoriety by the severity with which he suppressed the revolutionary disturbances in the Baltic provinces, has agreed to replace General Skallon as governor general of Warsaw. The complete disarming of the population of Warsaw was made a condition of his acceptance.

OLD SETTLERS OF LAS ANIMAS MEET

TRINIDAD, Colo., Sept. 1.—The annual meeting of the Old Settlers' association of Las Animas county was held on the court house lawn today, with about sixty of the pioneers in attendance. Albert Archibald holds the record for being the oldest settler in this county, having come here in 1861. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Dr. Michael Beshoar; first vice president, Samuel W. De Busk; second vice president, Senator C. Barela; third vice president, Mrs. F. G. Bloom; fourth vice president, Mrs. Tim Henderson; fifth vice president, H. L. Pearson; treasurer, F. G. Bloom; secretary, Edward West; financial secretary, Mrs. O. T. Clark; committee on membership, Mrs. William Elmore; committee on entertainment, Mrs. Flora West, chairman; Mrs. F. D. Hays and Mrs. John McEwan.

INCREASE IN COOK COUNTY ASSESSMENTS

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—Cook county's assessments on personal property amount of $574,897,550, full value, of $1,724,979,510, assessed value, according to figures completed by the clerks of the board of review. This is by far the largest total ever recorded for the county and an increase of approximately 33 per cent over the reviewers' total of last year, on which taxes were collected last spring.

The gain was due largely to the increases made upon the big estates that in the past had not been scheduled, according to the belief of the board, at anything like their full valuation, and to the increase made by the reviewing body in the personal valuations against large corporations.

The assessed value of the real estate in the county is placed at $327,692,745, and the full value at $2,213,361,275.

Craving for Drink Destroyed

The best aid to temperance is something that will strengthen the drunkard's wrecked nervous system and cure his unnatural craving for drink. We believe that any man who really desires to be cured of the liquor habit can cure himself by using Orrine. This remarkable discovery has made so many cures since we introduced it that we are glad to sell it under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

It is in two forms, No. 1 for those who can be given secretly, and No. 2 for those who wish to be cured. It is not only the most reliable treatment known, but it is also the most economical as it costs only $1.00 a box and there is no detention from the usual duties, while if a cure is not effected, there is no expense whatever. NEWSPAPER MEN VISIT CRIPPLE CREEK DISTRICT: PRAISE FOR SHORT LINE

[illegible] newspaper men made [illegible] the Short Line railway [illegible] Cripple Creek on [illegible] the delegation [illegible] Pike's Peak [illegible] Manitou [illegible] Colorado Springs [illegible] Manitou [illegible] Pike's Peak [illegible] Colorado Springs [illegible] the trip.

Aside from the many courtesies which the visitors received from the officials of the railroad, the Cripple Creek Press club, the Colorado Springs Press club and the Denver Press club, each guest was presented with a souvenir from the Cripple Creek District Press club, consisting of a handsome leather case containing a specimen of Cripple Creek ore, with the compliments of D. A. MacWatters and M. A. Matlock, traffic manager of the Short Line.

At Summit, the committee from the Cripple Creek District Press club boarded the train, with a carload of ore samples, which were promptly distributed among the visitors, each receiving a piece of genuine gold ore.

At Gunnison Gen. Sherman Bell came aboard, and the hero of San Juan hill and chief figure of the Colorado labor troubles was recognized by the newspaper men and immediately became the center of attraction for the interviewers of hundreds of papers.

Arriving in the district, the first section of the train stopped at Victor where the delegates were entertained at the Baltimore hotel. The second section went on to Cripple Creek. The arrival of the trains was marked by the blowing of the whistle and ringing of bells and the people turned out en masse to greet the visitors.

At Cripple Creek the members of the Press club of that city met the party and were the guests of honor at a banquet given at the Imperial hotel. The banquet hall was arranged in the Short Line colors, and when the visitors arrived they found from the ceiling pieces of crystal and gold brick from the mines.

Last night a ball was arranged at the I. O. O. F. hall, this being the chief social function of the trip.

The Cripple Creek district last night was a typical mining camp of the early days. The city was off and what the newspaper men did see and do in their inspection of the camp, by lamplight, would be worth mentioning.

Today the excursionists will go to Canon City over the Florence and Cripple Creek road. The Rio Grande will carry them through the Royal Gorge, over Marshall pass, through Buena Vista, Tennessee pass, and by moonlight through the canon of the Grand River to Glenwood Springs where they will arrive at 10 o'clock tonight.—Tomorrow morning the return trip will begin, with a stop scheduled at Leadville.

BRYAN HAILED WITH CHEERS

sonal business. He was expected to return about noon.

On his way from Bridgeport Mr. Bryan was asked what he thought about the argument of certain Republicans that Roosevelt will be the next logical Republican candidate for president. Mr. Bryan said that if it were true as many Republicans had declared, that he had completely destroyed the Democratic party, there ought to be dozens of able Republicans who would be available as a candidate, as it would appear that almost any Republican could win with the Democratic party wiped out.

There would then be no necessity of giving President Roosevelt what would be regarded by many as practically a third term. With such an easy victory for the Republicans ahead, why, he asked, should not somebody else be given a chance.

Federal Ownership.

When asked what he thought of the criticism by Democrats of his idea of federal ownership of railroads, Mr. Bryan said that he never had advocated anything that was not opposed in some quarters. He was told that some of the southern Democrats seemed alarmed lest the Jimcrow cars should be eliminated by the adoption of his ideas of federal ownership.

Mr. Bryan in reply to this, said that if the various states owned the lines within their borders, the local laws would continue to be enforced. He was asked if he meant that negroes and whites would be separated if the state had a Jimcrow law, to which he replied that the state laws would naturally hold good on local lines.

Whites and Negroes.

He did not care at this time to discuss the details of how the plan would affect the carriage of whites and negroes on the through lines under federal control. He had noticed that one citizen who did not give his name was very much worked up about the possible abolishment of the Jimcrow cars but he never attempted to answer the arguments of men who did not give their names and that he hoped to talk in various parts of the country and deal with the subject more completely than he could in conversation.

Mr. Bryan expected to remain at the Victoria hotel until 5:30 p. m. and then to attend an informal reception at the National Democratic club.

After that he intended to go to Newark, where he is scheduled to make a speech at 4 p. m. Later he will return to Jersey City, where he is expected to deliver three speeches. He will then return to New York in time to attend the dinner given to him by the newspaper men.

Mr. Bryan announced a change of plan regarding his proposed trip to New Zealand. "I think I shall not go," he said, "for I've been away from home a long time and it feels good to get back. I had intended to go there after the election, but have decided not to."

Mr. Bryan was the guest of the National Democratic club for 23 minutes this afternoon, where he was welcomed by several hundred members. Richard Croker, Jr., was a member of the committee that escorted Mr. Bryan to the club dinner.

Mr. Bryan said in part:

"I want to thank the club for this reception. It is not my first visit here, and unless you enjoin me it will not be my last. It has been said that I may be your candidate for president. I have twice had the distinction of being the candidate of my party for that great honor. Whether I shall have it again is more than you or I can say. I am assured, in leading newspapers this morning that some of the persons who were for me will not now attempt to force that honor on me. Whatever I shall do, I must have the approval of my own conscience. I prefer to have the honor of my own conscience to having the support of all the people of the United States. A majority is not always in the right, but it is so presumed to be in government, and the only way for a man who finds himself in the minority, is to fight for his ideas until he wins the majority to his cause. I have no monopoly on the thinking of the Democratic party. Democrats do not need a leader. No one can become a leader until he is prepared to go with the people. I know what the people want today. I know what the politicians will want tomorrow, for they are a timid class and want to do what the people desire."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription,

Is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse because of the uncertainty as to their harmless character, but is a medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION, a full list of all its ingredients being printed, in plain English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol in its make-up. The "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is in fact the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold through druggists, that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. Furthermore, it is the only medicine for woman's special diseases, the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of some of these endorsements will be sent to any address, postpaid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Don't forget that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for woman's weaknesses and delicate ailments, is not a patent or secret medicine, being the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and graduated physician, engaged in the practice of his chosen specialty—that of diseases of women—that its ingredients are printed in plain English on every bottle-wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement worth more than all the so-called "testimonials" ever published for other medicines. Send for these endorsements as above. They are free for the asking.

If you suffer from periodical, headache, backache, dizziness, pain or dragging down sensation low down in the abdomen, weak back, have disagreeable and weakening, catarrhal, pelvic drain, or are in distress from being long on your feet, then you may be sure of benefit from taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

TAUGHT TO TAKE CARE OF BABIES

GIRLS IN CLEVELAND PUBLIC SCHOOLS ARE LEARNING HOUSEKEEPING. MOTHERHOOD. ALSO IN CHARGE OF BABIES FOR HOME AND FOR MOTHERS.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 1.—The Cleveland public schools are going into the wifemaking business. Girls will be taught how to sweep, to cook, to economize in household expenditures, to make their own clothes, to take care of babies and to care for their husbands when they come home sick. Those back of this movement for the welfare of husbands are Superintendent Elson, of Cleveland's public schools, and Assistant Superintendent Warren E. Hicks, whose ideas will be embodied in the new "Tech" High school. Mr. Hicks says:

"We are going to fit our girls to be wives and not servants, and cooking is only one of the features of the course. A partial outline of the course would be this: First year, applied arts and elementary sewing; second year, elementary chemistry in its relation to household duties, and a course in the arts and sewing; third and fourth years, the cooking will be taken up.

"The average girl who marries nowadays is grossly ignorant of the duties the average man expects her to perform as his wife. She knows nothing of cooking. Usually. She must be taught how to care for the invalid, the food be digested and the attention bestowed must receive. She must learn of the care of little babies. She should know how to do her marketing economically. We shall teach her all these things. They will have real babies to dress and bathe and care for under the watchful supervision, of course, of the teachers, who have gone through all these experiences."

STILL A CHANCE FOR OLD GIRLS

NONE OF THE OLDER DAMES WILL BE DISTURBED AT Y. W. C. A. AT PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—There is still a chance for old girls at the home of the Young Women's Christian association, Eighteenth and Arch streets. Miss Kennedy, the superintendent, said today that none of the older dames now in the big boarding house will be disturbed.

She said, however, that, in order to look out for the younger element, it will be necessary hereafter to limit the age of newcomers to 35.

She says the home is overcrowded and, as its particular object is to care for young girls, the old ones will have to be debarred unless there happens to be plenty of room in the building. But there will be no exodus of elderly maidens, as was at first feared.

DELEGATES PRAISE LOCAL PRESS CLUB

ALL DAY NIGHT IN GARDEN OF THE GODS WAS GREATEST FEATURE OF COLORADO ENTERTAINMENT.

We want the Colorado Springs boys who planned that night in the Garden of the Gods to make a visit to Birmingham next year and give us pointers how to entertain the 1907 convention of the International League of Press clubs" said J A Rountree chairman of the Alabama delegation that secured the next convention, when he met one of the members of the Pike's Peak Press club committee at the Santa Fe depot just before the Short Line train pulled out to Cripple Creek.

Mr Rountree was not alone in his admiration for the novel feature The highest words of praise were heard on all sides and it was agreed that the camp was the greatest feature of the entire week

One night like that is worth a year of any man's life" said Lewis G Early, of Redding, Pa., secretary of the International league

Miss Mary McCormack and Miss Maude Roach, who have been spending the summer with Mr and Mrs M J Griffin at Roswell hav returned to their homes in Chicago.

FAIRLEY SAYS P. B. STEWART WILL BE REPUBLICAN NOMINEE

"Philip B. Stewart, of Colorado Springs, will be nominated for governor by the Republican state convention. He will receive upward of 659 votes of the total of 880 that will be cast."

This statement was made last night by Chairman D. B Fairley, of the Republican state committee, on his arrival in this city from Denver, where he put in a busy week at headquarters

"John Holmberg, of Denver, is the only contesting candidate for the nomination, as far as I know. Frank Gowdy, also of Denver, was a probable candidate, but will not oppose the nomination of Mr. Stewart. Advices from the various parts of the state show that Mr Stewart will win by a very large majority."

Mr. Fairley said that the statements that have been published to the effect that W S. Boynton, of Colorado Springs, is a candidate to succeed him as state chairman, are without foundation. John Vivian, according to Mr. Fairley, will be elected as chairman without opposition. If opposition should develop, however, he will not cast fewer votes in the state convention than will Mr Stewart, in the opinion of the state chairman.

Philip B. Stewart is a native of Vermont. He came to Colorado Springs about ten years ago, and has been interested in business in this vicinity for a number of years. He has taken an active part in the affairs of the Republican party, both in the county and state, for the last six years, and is chairman of the Republican county central committee. He has never held public office.

Mr, Stewart is a warm personal friend of President Theodore Roosevelt, and the president always makes his headquarters at Mr Stewart's home during his visits to Colorado Springs

The Millinery Situation for 1906-'07

Our Miss Rose is still in market with the foremost designers of the east, where she is gathering the newest styles and forwarding them by express—many of which are now ready—Street Hats from $2.50 up: Dress Hats from $5.00 up. Following is a summary of the autumn and winter millinery situation for 1906 and 1907 as reported by our Mrs. Enman, who has recently returned from the east:

Broadly speaking, there are this season two distinct types of trimmed hats the very large and the very small. There is no medium. But in the great variety of models offered in both the sorts mentioned, it is safe to assume that every woman will find something suited to her requirements and also of a nature that will harmonize well with the costume that she adopts—it's a season of greater varieties than ever heretofore. One point about the hats this year is that detail of line, be it in the trimming or the material, is unimportant—the general effect is the thing, and as long as this is right, everything else is disregarded.

PREST FELT HATS have come to the fore in a very strong manner and will be much in demand, not only in walking hats, but in the dressier hats as well—it is really wonderful what beautiful ideas have been brought out in these.

THE DRESSIER HATS have undulating and straight brims; and, too, the mushroom and turn-up-all-around styles will be popular, while in the small hats the elongated models, hood shapes and toques will lead; the trimmings will consist mainly of silks, velvets, plumage and whole birds.

S.S.S. A CERTAIN SAFE TREATMENT

Even if mercury and potash could cure Contagious Blood Poison the condition in which these strong minerals leave the system would make the cure worse than the disease But they cannot cure the vile disorder; they can only cover up the symptoms for awhile to break out with renewed violence when the treatment is left off When the virus of Contagious Blood Poison enters the blood the entire circulation becomes poisoned, and the loathsome symptoms begin to appear. The mouth and throat ulcerate, hair and eyebrows come out, glands of the neck and groin swell, copper-colored spots appear on the body, and in severe cases sores and ulcers break out, and even the bones become diseased S. S. S. is the only certain, safe cure for Contagious Blood Poison; thousands have been cured by it after failing with the mineral treatment Hot Springs etc It is the only remedy that is able to get at the root of the disease and force out the poison so that no signs are ever seen again S S S is purely vegetable, being made of roots, herbs and barks—and never leaves any bad effects but instead, tones up the stomach and digestion and builds up every part of the system while removing the poison from the blood. Of Chicago, Who Designed and Made the Stratton Monument.

Wednesday. It will arrive in about one week after being shipped.

The monument, which cost $5,000, was designed and chiseled by Miss Nellie Walker, junior instructor in the Chicago Art Institute, and an ardent worker Rhode Island granite was used in preference to Colorado material because of its finer grain, and its particular adaptability to the special grade of sculpturing required by Miss Walker's design

The monument weighs 20 tons It is one solid block of granite and is eight feet high seven feet wide and four feet thick The massive outlines of the monument stand out unrelieved, from a distance and are intended to convey from afar the strong will and character of the man whose life it represents On closer inspection a figure of charity is seen extending a helping hand to an unfortunate The representation which is carried out in a beautiful and artistic manner is intended by the sculptor to convey the generous nature of the dead millionaire as known during his lifetime only to those closely associated with him

The monument will bear the inscription from Shakespeare's Timon of Athens 'Tis not enough to help the feeble up, but to support him after.'

FUTURITY

Rich Stake Won By Electioneer, 4 to 1 Shot

NELSON OR GANS?

Which Will Be the Lightweight Champion After Tomorrow's Battle at Goldfield?--Odds Favor the Colored Fighter

ELECTIONEER WINS $50,000 FUTURITY

Ninth at Start, Victor Finishes Three-Fourths of a Length Ahead of Keene's Pope Joan. Fifteen Two-Year-Olds Race Madly.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Down a lane of gray brown earth which had all the softness of velvet beneath the tread of the flying thoroughbred hoofs, fifteen fleet two-year-olds raced madly today to a goal three-quarters of a mile away, where lay a purse of nearly $50,000. It was the nineteenth running of the Futurity at Sheepshead Bay, and as a roar from nearly 40,000 throats rent the air, Electioneer, a well-named colt by Voter-Quesal, flashed under the wire a winner by three-quarters of a length.

Another champion had been proclaimed and William Lakeland, a horseman by profession, who trains his bread winners himself and sleeps in the barn when necessary, had snatched the richest prize of the year from half a score of millionaires.

At the winner's quarters was Pope Joan, the fastest filly of the year and the best of the trio which J. R. Keene had to the post to be played as favorites at the short price of 8 to 5. Demund, the Goldfinch colt, for which Paul J. Rainey paid $45,000 early in the season, was third, beaten for second honors by the shortest of heads. He ran a creditable race. Next came Yankee Gun, an added starter. Peterpan, to which the frantic players of the Keene stable had pinned their faith, Yankee Gift, owned by C. R. Ellison, Ballot added by Mr. Keene, to take the place of Zambesi, Conville, one of the most widely-tipped horses in the race, Horace E., the famous western colt, bought by Roy Rainey for $25,000, with the Futurity in view, Don Enrique, the Belmont representative, Kentucky Beau, backed from 20 to 1 down to 4 to 1, Old Honesty, the only 100 to 1 shot in the stake, Altuda, Orandi, played by a few because Miller had the mount, and last of all, Pursuance, which opened at 50 to 1 and stayed there.

It was one of the best and most truly run Futurities ever seen. So well bunched was the field that a furlong from home anyone of the fifteen had a chance. But Electioneer was best. He never faltered under a grueling drive which began at the head of the stretch and lasted until the finish. Jockey Willie Shaw was in the saddle, and never did a boy give a more skillful exhibition of horsemanship. He judged his pace and timed his winning rush to the fraction of a second. He played his whip without mercy through the last sixteenth and won a race which called forth a thunder of cheers for both horse and rider.

Electioneer was second choice in the betting, at 4 to 1. In the first mad rush Electioneer was overlooked, and his price lengthened to eight. Then there followed a scene in the ring such as has been seldom witnessed at Sheepshead Bay. Electioneer money seemed to pour in from every side. And the layers were fairly swamped under the cloudburst of gold, silver and notes which were thrust upon them. Peterpan, Pope Joan and Ballot of the Keene entry were neglected. The glamour faded from the $45,000 Demund and the $25,000 Horace E., the millionaire owners were passed by in the mad hurry to back the horse of a practical horseman. From 8 to 1 the bookmakers cut until just half that figure was the prevailing odds at post time. Even then the Electioneer followers kept hammering away until 3 to 1 was hard to find in the last few seconds.

There was a delay of nearly eight minutes at the post. Then the webbing was sprung, and away jumped Pope Joan. Peterpan followed her for a few hundred yards, but the pace was too swift for him. Yankee Gun got away third and Horace E. was fourth to show. Electioneer had been a bit unfortunate at the break, though the start was good for all. He was ninth as the timer's flag went down. Shaw took in the situation and acted with swift decision. He pulled Electioneer well to the outside and began a race which will live long in the memory of those who saw it. Clear of interference, Electioneer set to work to overhaul his field. At the turn from the Futurity chute into the stretch of the main track he was still lengths away from Pope Joan, who was already being hailed as the winner. Demund was second, fighting the Keene filly at every step. Peterpan was third and Yankee Gun was fourth.

Shaw pulled his whip and at the first lash Electioneer jumped into a quicker stride. Horse after horse succumbed to his heart-breaking rush, until first a few yards from the wire his muzzle showed in front of Pope Joan. The record-breaking crowd roared its encouragement. Shaw played the whip once more and the race was over. As Shaw returned with the winner he was greeted by a remarkable demonstration. It was unquestionably one of the most popular victories of the year, and the how the race goers dealt the bookmakers was stinging. The time, 1:13 3-5, was not fast.

The Futurity purse this year contained exactly $46,770. Of this amount $37,270 went to Mr. Lakeland, the owner of the winner. Mr. Keene received $3,750 as the share for the second horse and Paul Rainey drew $2,000 for Demund's third honors.

Electioneer was bred and named by the late Major G. B. Thomas of Kentucky. Two thousand dollars of the Futurity purse goes to the nominator of the winner, but Major Thomas being dead, the $2,000 will be paid to his estate. Mr. Keene received an additional $1,250 for nominating the second horse and $500 goes to J. B. Haggin, the nominator of Demund.

The day's results:

First race, five and one-half furlongs—Temaceo won, Monfort second, Eudora third. Time, 1:07.

Second race, the Inaugural steeplechase, about two miles—John M. P. won, Belligerent second, Oro third. Time, 4:07.

Third race, Fall handicap, six furlongs—Roseben won, Neva Lee second, Ormondale third. Time, 1:12 2-5.

Fourth race, the Futurity, six furlongs, Futurity course—Electioneer, 115, Shaw, 4 to 1 and 8 to 5, won; Pope Joan, 118, Nicol, 8 to 5 and 2 to 5, second; Demund, 123, Radtke, 5 to 1 and 2 to 1, third. Time, 1:13 3-5. Orandi, Peterpan, Horace E., Don Enrique, Conville, Old Honesty, Pursuance, Altuda, Kentucky Beau, Yankee Gift, Ballot and Yankee Gun also ran.

Fifth race, mile and 70 yards, Toddy won, Alles second, Annethiral. Time, 1:39 2-5.

Sixth race, mile and one-sixteenth, on turf, Ghetto won, Kitty Shaw second, Nealon third. Time, 1:46 3-5.

PULLIAM IN CONTROL OF BOSTON NATIONALS

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—A dispatch from Boston says:

It is persistently reported here that Chas. Pulliam of the National league has secured control of the Boston club and that arrangements of the deal is being rushed until the close of the present season. While Mr. Pulliam was here a few weeks ago he said that negotiations for the purchase of the Boston club were on, but because of the high price asked by Soden and Conant for the franchise, players and accessories but persons who were in a position to know say that a deal has been consummated.

NELSON AND GANS READY FOR BIG GOLDFIELD FIGHT

By Alva Henderson

GOLDFIELD, Nev., Sept. 1.—Matters were quiet in pugilistic circles today. Little was heard of training camps in relation to the weighing squabble and the incident appears to have been forgotten in the growing interest over the results of the championship battle which is now but 18 hours off.

Nelson transferred his quarters to the arena this afternoon and he will taper off his conditioning at the ring side until the call of time. The following men have been selected to act in the Dairy corner on Labor day: Tim McGrath, Jabbo Reid and Bobbie Lundie. Nolan will act as chief adviser to these men.

Joe Gans today sent a message to John Kelly in New York to bet all he could at the prevailing odds that he would defeat the Hogeswich fighter on Monday. The colored man supplemented this message with the statement that he was absolutely within the weight and that his condition is perfect. Later a telegram was received by Tex Rickard from Bat Masterson, asking him to verify the Kelly message. Rickard replied that the message was all right, that he himself had seen the telegram sent.

Gans borrowing the sum of $2,000 from the club, which he immediately sent to town to bet on himself. The wager was placed at odds of ten to eight.

Here is everything you want to know concerning the Nelson-Gans fight:

Principals—Battling Nelson, of Hegewisch, Ill., white lightweight champion of the world, and Joe Gans, of Baltimore, Md., lightweight champion of the world.

At stake—Lightweight championship of the world.

Place—Goldfield, Nev.

Date—Labor day, September 3.

Length of fight—Forty-five rounds. Nevada is the only state in the union where a finish fight can be held. First finish fight in lightweight class since Jack McAuliffe won from Billy Myers at New Orleans September 5, 1892.

Purse—$30,000, the largest ever posted for a lightweight battle. To be divided as follows, win, lose or a draw: [illegible]

Weight—133 pounds at 3 o'clock.

Referee—George Siler.

Auspices—Goldfield Athletic club, of which Tex Rickard is president.

Accommodations—Arena to seat 10,000. Price of seats, from $5 to $25.

Altitude of Goldfield—5,000 feet above sea level. Rare desert air.

Last big fight in Nevada—March 17, 1897, when Fitzsimmons won the heavyweight title from Corbett at Carson City. Hart defeated Root at Reno July 3, 1905.

On the square—United States Senator George S. Nixon has declared that the fight must be on the square or the citizens of the silver state will know the reason why, and that if either principals or promoters try any crooked work the state won't be big enough to hold them. While the articles look slightly suspicious, Nelson's name is a guarantee of a square fight, and Al Herford is no longer Gans' manager.

There will be several thousand Nevadans on hand to see that there is no faking.

Why Nelson Should Win—An endurance that is the marvel of the ring, a capacity for assimilating punishment that has seldom been equalled in his class, a rugged constitution, a remarkable physique, and a magnificent courage, are the qualities upon which Battling Nelson relies to make him the lightweight champion of the world. In a meteoric career, he has defeated all the best in his class except Gans, and is a come. The fact that it is to be a finish fight, of 133 ringside in fighting togs, and that the referee will not be allowed to lay hands on the fighters in separating them in the breakaways, are all in Nelson's favor. He is younger than Gans by six years, and has never dissipated as has the negro. Despite reports from Goldfield that Gans has had no trouble in making the weight, it is doubtful whether, at 130 or 131 pounds, he can retain the strength and ginger to pull him through a furious finish fight the Victor. Nelson is usually poor during the opening rounds, but after 15 or 20 have gone by, will come up strong and his splendid physique will carry him through. Nelson has a hard wallop, but he has to get in a large number to make it effective. It is an open question whether his style of closer, rougher fighting, and smothered-up, rushing-on-top-of-you tactics will be of avail against Gans' generalship and cleverness, but there are many who believe that Gans' science and Gans' generalship will go the same route as did Britt science and Britt generalship a year ago. Nelson is the toughest and gamest lightweight that ever donned the padded mits.

Why Gans Should Win—Backed by 12 years' experience in the ring, during which he has achieved a position as one of the greatest fighters the country has ever seen and has demonstrated unusual ability as a scientific lexer and ring general, Joe Gans expects to defeat Nelson inside of 10 rounds tomorrow. In experience, in cleverness, in speed, in science and in generalship, he is the acknowledged superior to any man in his class. He is cool under fire and has a punch in both hands that can deliver a knockout. Though a veteran, he has escaped, through his cleverness, from any severe beatings, while Nelson has never emerged from a fight without having taken one. His machine-like precision in protecting himself, his agility to keep out of harm's way, and his quickness to land a knockout if his opponent leaves an opening are dangerous factors. In proper condition, he is a great master in self-defense, and an artist in the handling of his mits. But his proper fighting weight is six or seven pounds above what he will have to weigh in at Goldfield, and much depends upon whether he can really keep his strength at this weight, and succeed in beating down the Dane in the earlier rounds of the fight. In a long fight he will be at a disadvantage. In accepting all of Nolan's disadvantageous terms, he shows that he possesses great confidences in his old-time ability. His chances depend upon his condition, his experience and his science.

AITELL AND WEEKS READY

BIGGEST BOUT IN DISTRICT'S HISTORY AT VICTOR TOMORROW NIGHT.

BOTH BOYS IN EXCELLENT TRIM. WEEKS THE FAVORITE. RUGGED FIGHTER AGAINST CLEVER BOXER.

Special to The Gazette.

VICTOR, Colo., Sept. 1.—The greatest prize fight ever seen in this district, and one of the best battles among fistic topics, which has ever been pulled off in the state will take place here Monday night between Freddie Weeks, champion featherweight of Colorado, Wyoming, Idaho, Montana, and Monte Attell, champion bantamweight of America.

The interest in the forthcoming battle has never before been equalled in this section, and the sale of seats has been tremendous. Lovers of the manly art have chosen their favorite boys, and their seats and will be crowded to the limit when the gong sounds. It is expected that fully 6,000 people will witness this twenty-round contest.

Both boys are in excellent trim and have about completed their long training bouts. Weeks runs from seven to ten miles before breakfast, skipping the rope and boxing from six to ten rounds daily with sparring partners has been the course pursued for three weeks. Each boy is confident and as the principals of his life. Weeks will probably enter the ring two to three pounds heavier than his clever little adversary from San Francisco.

So far there has been but little betting, but Weeks will be the favorite as he is the cooler, more rugged and is a better fighter from the top of the gong until the finish. It is the same old story of a fighter with the punch and an exceptionally clever boxer.

PLAY 24 INNINGS

In the 24 years of professional baseball in this city only three games have exceeded seven innings and the Philadelphia-American team won the Athletic record June 29, 1902, the second game July 4 [illegible] and the third was today's.

RULE ON PUNTS IS THE MOST RADICAL

—J. R. RICHARDS.

Local Football Authority Returns From East and Discusses Change in Rules---Looks Good Season Here.

"Football will be more scientific under the new rules," said J. R. Richards, principal of the Colorado Springs High school, and coach of both the High school and Colorado college football teams, yesterday, in discussing the changes that have been made in the playing rules for the coming season.

"There will be more room for headwork on the part of the coach and the man who runs the team," he said. "It will require a clever fellow to handle a team in action. The quarterback will be a more important factor on the aggressive, although the rules will not require a different sort of man in build.

"The game will not be so changed as to be particularly different to the spectators. The rules will make a greater difference in the far east, where they had almost forgotten how to make an end run. In the west the game has been more open.

"There will be more kicking, not particularly because of the 15-yard rule, but because of the other rule, which I consider more radical than any of the other changes, that a punt shall be anybody's ball after touching ground. This will require the double line of defense, which, however, both the college and the High school have used for the past two years, and will require two or three men in the backfield on defense. It will mean that the ends and the backs must be fast.

The forward pass I do not consider of any particular advantage.

"The 10-yard rule will undoubtedly make it harder to score. It will open up the game some, but by no means will it do away with plays into the line. A good plunger will still be a valuable man. He will only have to make three and a third yards a scrimmage for the required distance.

"As far as injuries go, the changes will probably not lessen them materially. The roughness and 'dirty' work will still depend on the officials."

Mr. Richards has just returned from a two months' vacation in Wisconsin, and has as yet secured no line on the material and prospects at Colorado college, although he has his High school team pretty well lined up. He believes he will have another championship High school eleven, although he loses several of his stars.

In regard to the intercollegiate situation, he says: "We ought to have a good season, and a clean one. Colorado has an excellent set of coaches. Mr. Rothgeb at Fort Collins and Mr. Koehler at Denver, the new men, are both good. Mr. Ellsworth, in his two years at the Mines, has done good work. Mr. Castleman, at Boulder, is the unknown quantity as a coach, although a good athlete with a strong record. Koehler and Rothgeb both have excellent records as athletes and coaches and should put out some fine teams. This year I look to see an good football in Colorado as in the middle west."

FOOTBALL PRACTICE BEGINS; TERRORS MAY PLAY SALT LAKE; TIGERS ARE AFTER BIG GAME

Tuesday of this week will see the local football stars in action. Captain Morrell will have his "Terrors" at work with the opening of school in preparation for another championship season. By next Monday the Tigers will don the football togs, it being expected that a large number of the college warriors will return to school a few days ahead of time to get in a few licks on the gridiron.

The opening game of the season will probably be the annual preseason contest between the Terrors and the Tigers. This will probably be arranged for Saturday, September 22. Hopes of getting a game for the Pike Centennial woke between the University of Wisconsin and Colorado college have about been given up, as the badgers do not return to school until that week and the Big nine conference rules forbid preliminary training. However, the college will go after some other big team. The University of Utah may be secured for this opening contest, or the Tigers may look eastward for their opponent.

As at present arranged, Manager K. McClintock announces the following Colorado college schedule:

Sept. 29 or Oct. 6—University of Utah here (probable).
Oct. 13—Colorado at Boulder.
Oct. 20—Open.
Oct. 27—Aggies here.
Nov. 3—Denver at Denver (practice).
Nov. 10—Open.
Nov. 17—Mines at Denver.
Nov. 29.—(Thanksgiving.)—Denver here.

The High school's schedule will not be arranged until the annual meeting of the league some time the latter part of this month. It is announced, however, that if the Terrors show championship form, negotiations will be taken up with a view to securing a game with the Salt Lake City high school or some other school outside the Colorado league. High school stock took a rise yesterday with the announcement that Harbert, the star end, and Murphy, the big fullback, may be among the "candidates" for positions on the 1906 team.

FOOTBALL SCHEDULES FOR COLLEGES, EAST AND WEST

It is now but a short time when the football warrior will succeed the baseball hero. Already plans for the coming season are materializing. Colleges and universities the country over will open for another year's work within the next two or three weeks. Their opening is the signal for the beginning of the football season. The schedules of all the big colleges and universities have been announced and will appear today in The Gazette.

Following the edict of the faculties of the middle west, that in the future athletics must not become such a prominent place, as heretofore, the football schedules for the big universities of that section will be unusually light next fall.

The action of the Wisconsin faculty in voting against football has practically ruined any chances the Badgers had of being a factor next season, and from present indications the fight for the championship will be between Minnesota and Chicago.

Michigan's Big Drop.

After sheltering sensational teams for the past five years, Michigan finds herself without a game of any importance, except the contest with Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, and with not more than three veterans eligible, the gridiron outlook at Ann Arbor cannot be described as exactly roseate.

All the big middle western universities will close their campaigns on the Saturday preceding Thanksgiving day, but Minnesota has succeeded in getting a pretty formidable list of dates for a comparatively short season. In addition to the big game with Chicago, on November 10, the Gophers will play Nebraska and Indiana, two strong teams, and on November 17 will clash with the Carlisle Indians at Minneapolis. This contest will be second only to the Chicago game, as it will do much to settle the much-mooted question of the relative strength of eastern and western football teams.

Seek Eastern Opponents.

Like Michigan and Minnesota, Chicago was anxious to arrange a game with a strong eastern eleven, and made overtures to Cornell, but the two managers could not reach an agreement, and the game is off. All of Chicago's games will be played at home, while the only trip that Minnesota will make will be to Chicago.

Despite the many rumors concerning the abolition of professional coaches in the west, practically all of the old gridiron directors will be at their old stands when the whistle blows in September.

Alonzo Stagg, the former Yale football and baseball star, will be retained by Chicago, while Michigan will again pin faith on "Hurry Up" Yost. Dr. Harry Williams will direct the fortunes of Minnesota, and after having developed consistently strong teams, his chief desire will be to down the Carlisle Indians, who for years have done creditable work against the best aggregations of the east.

The preliminary football season in the east begins on Saturday, September 22, with a few contests by minor colleges. The big universities do not fall into line until a week or so later. On September 29, Princeton will bump shoulders with Villa Nova, while Harvard and Yale do not enter the arena until October 3, when they engage Bowdoin and Wesleyan, respectively. That starts the great machinery going which will grind on in bi-weekly contests until the chaff is separated from the wheat and the final victor is proclaimed the intercollegiate champion in November.

About the middle of October the football situation begins to get acute, and the bigger colleges, which have waited long enough to digest their preliminary meals of the smaller colleges, begin to meet each other. On October 13, Princeton clashes with the Navy and West Point with Colgate. On the same day Pennsylvania will meet Swarthmore. On October 20, Yale will tackle Pennsylvania State at New Haven. A week later Harvard makes its annual attack upon the citadel of West Point. Last year Harvard, with much difficulty broke down the outer walls of the Hudson fort with a score of 5 to 0, leaving Yale to make a rush into the breach with a score of 20 to 6. Harvard is the varsity to this year, as usual, but it expects to slay the enemy and leave no pickings for her New Haven rival a week later.

While the Cambridge eleven is playing at West Point, Princeton and Cornell will meet, in all probability, in New York. If they do, New Yorkers will see a good football battle, which will help drown their sorrow over the loss of the Columbia games. Last year the Tigers defeated the Red and White 16 to 6.

There will be a number of interesting contests on Noveber 3. Princeton plays Dartmouth, which proved her conqueror last year; Harvard plays Brown, Pennsylvania plays Lafayette, Minnesota plays Nebraska and the Navy plays Pennsylvania State. On the following Saturday, November 10, Princeton will try a hand at West Point and Brown will face Yale, while the Indians will attempt to scalp Harvard.

But all of these games will be as nothing to the contest that is reserved for November 17, when Yale and Princeton again trot upon the football field to do battle before thousands of admiring followers. The defeat last year of 4 to 23 still rankles in the Tiger's heart, and there will be fire in his eye as he watches the big Blue athletes rush upon the gridiron amid a thunderous burst of applause and throw off the blankets ready for the fray. viding part interest with the Harvard-Dartmouth, the Pennsylvania-Michigan and the Chicago-Illinois contests on the same day. A week later comes the closing big battle of the season, when Yale and Harvard play on famous this year at New Haven. Coach Bold's fine showing with his men last year, when the Crimson held Yale down to 6 points, has aroused much interest as to what the Harvard eleven will be able to do with two years of Bold's coaching.

Other important games after the Harvard-Yale game will be the Pennsylvania-Cornell contest at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving day, and the West Point-Annapolis contest at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, on December 1.

KID BELL PICKS JOE GANS TO WIN

[illegible] CHAMPION SAYS HE CAN LICK GANS IF HE WEIGHS 130 POUNDS.

Kid Bell, the local colored scrapper and featherweight champion of Colorado, picks Joe Gans to win tomorrow's fight with Battling Nelson. Bell has boxed with Gans and last year he saw Nelson knock out Britt at Colma, so he knows something when he speaks.

"I don't see how Bat figures to beat Gans," says the Kid, "unless he wants Joe to make such light weight as to weaken him considerably. The people are not going to Goldfield to see a fight in which one of the men will be so weak that he can hardly stand on his feet, and that's what will happen if Billy Nolan insists on making Gans weigh in at ringside with his fighting togs on, for to do that Joe will have to make 130 pounds. At that weight a baby can beat Gans.

"I know that Gans can make 133 and that is all he can do and be strong. One Sunday when I was training for my fight with Abe Lebsi in Frisco I went out to watch Corbett, who was training at Colma garden to fight Mike (Twin) Sullivan, and I was given a chance to box with him, at that time he weighed 135 with his bathrobe on. We went three rounds and you can bet your own dope, but I say that Gans is the slickest lightweight that ever drew on a boxing glove.

"Gans is so shifty with his mitts that he can maneuver his opponent [illegible] and if the weight don't hurt him he will tie the Battler into knots. He is not a scientific fighter, but he's got the bulldog grit, and can stand punishment. But a beating never did any fighter good. Gans is the greatest lightweight in the world today. He has the ring experience, knows all the tricks of the game, is a good boxer, is a good hitter, has good [illegible] of distance, and I've a notion I could, in either [illegible] I would be all knock Nelson out in the [illegible] twentieth round."

Did She Do Wisely?

A mother brought her daughter to Colorado Springs a few years ago with the family physician had advised them to come on account of what he believed to be consumption of the lungs in the daughter's case. They had been here about three months and railroad tickets would have to be used soon, if at all. The daughter had lost a little flesh and it was plain that if she went home she could not live. They had been watching our advertisements and decided to visit us and see what, if anything, could be done. As a result they began the treatment and so rapid was the improvement that the mother went home and left the daughter here for four months. She was so well then that she went home and regained her health, although she was very imprudent at times. For instance, one day she was helping her brother to round up some horses when one of them broke away. She rode after it just as she would if she had been perfectly well. In writing us about it afterwards she said that it brought on a hemorrhage, but she got the horse or she would have been riding after him yet. She was at the house when the hemorrhage began, and used the instrument at once and the hemorrhage stopped. Fortunately for her this was her only serious mishap until she was so well that she could endure so much out of door exercise as she ever had. In about two years after leaving here she was married, as is very apt to be the case with those who take this treatment home with them and recover. She is considerably heavier than before she had consumption. There are two points that we wish to make in this case. The climate could not make the cure alone. It needed just the help that this treatment affords. The climate makes its cures by encapsulating or covering over the diseased places. In this case those places were too large to be covered over and had to be healed from the healthy parts of the lung. This is what this treatment does, and when this is done and a good healthy scar forms, the disease is entirely out of the system. The patient is cured and why should they not live where they choose. We like to have people live in Colorado Springs, for it is the most healthful and delightful place to live in the world, but it is hardly fair to one who can be cured to neglect to cure them and thus oblige them to live here. We believe in making them well and sending them home if they want to go so they can send others. The other point in this case is that one can finish up the cure at their own homes even if they are unwise and careless or have slight accidents sometimes. It proves that the use of the machine in the low altitudes is like carrying the good effects of the climate into a low altitude. It is a wise thing to call now at our office and talk with those who are using the treatment and see some who have been cured. The offices are in the Barnes Building. Office hours from 10 to 12 a. m. and from 2 to 4 p.m. Sundays by appointment only. Examination free.

BURNS CRITICAL

DOES NOT LIKE REPORT ISSUED BY PRESIDENT OF PHARMACIST COMPANY.

James F. Burns yesterday issued a circular to the stockholders of the Pharmacist Consolidated Mining company in which he severely criticises the treasurer's report recently issued by W. F. Rock, who is also president and general manager of the company. Mr. Burns accuses Mr. Rock of desiring to select a board of directors who will give him unlimited power that he may lease the property at such terms and to such parties as he wishes. Mr. Rock is also soundly scored for drawing a salary of $100 per month, "to look after ore receipts amounting to $308.62," when, according to Mr. Burns, the present condition of the treasury of the company does not warrant the payment of any salaries to company officials. Mr. Burns accuses Mr. Rock of desiring to lease the property for a period of two years and the privilege of renewal for two years, practically a five-year lease, and with "no compulsory sinking." In a letter to Mr. Rock, he also advocates the embodiment of a clause in all leases granted by the company whereby the company shall deduct one per cent of the gross proceeds to apply to the payment of taxes. This is to protect the company from having a lessee ship out ore and then give up the lease, leaving the company to pay taxes on the gross production.

FIRE THREATENS GIDDINGS BUILDING

What came near being a serious conflagration was discovered in the law offices of Lucius H. Rouse, on the third floor of the Giddings building yesterday afternoon. During Mr. Rouse's absence, a fire started in some unaccountable way and was burning briskly when it was discovered by City Attorney Robinson's stenographer. She notified Judge Robinson of the fire, and he rushed into the room and extinguished the blaze before the fire department arrived. The fire had burned from the floor half way up to the ceiling, when the city attorney arrived. Had the blaze not been discovered when it was, one of Colorado Springs' finest building blocks might now be in ruins.

COURT NEWS

John Linden, charged with stealing a case of tobacco from the Denver & Rio Grande depot, was yesterday bound over to the district court under bonds of $750 by Justice W. N. Ruby. He will await trial in jail. Linden claims that he was too drunk to know whether or not he committed the theft.

Probation Officer W. M. Reasoner has found that Joseph Peterson, 16 years old, is not guilty of annoying a girl in North park, as was reported.

Lizzie Castlebury and Henry Wesley, both colored, were yesterday bound over to the district court by Justice W. N. Ruby. They are charged with a statutory offense.

Police court was very busy during August, 1906, than during the same month of last year. A total of 110 arrests were made during August of this year and 143 during August of last year.

MRS. FANNY G. B—N SUES FOR A DIVORCE

Alleging that her husband's drunkenness has become so habitual that she has to put him to bed nearly every night, Rose Brown yesterday began suit in the district court against Hall G. Brown for divorce and $50 per month alimony.

The Browns were married in Colorado Springs August 28, 1896, and they have three children. Mrs. Brown alleges that for the last 18 months, her husband has been drunk most all the time; that he has spent all of the family money for liquor, and that she has nothing left with which to feed and clothe her children.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF WHEEL

TWO WELL-KNOWN BOYS ARE UNDER ARREST POLICE CHIEF WILL PUSH CASE.

Two well-known Colorado Springs boys, both of whom are just 15 years old, face a charge of grand larceny for the alleged theft of a bicycle. They are Harry Woodward, son of Abner F. Woodward, 311 North Weber street, and Stanley Jones, son of William H. Jones, 25 South Wahsatch avenue. The boys were arrested yesterday by Detective John Bowers and have been released under bonds each. Chief of Police Adams says that he will ask the district attorney to prosecute.

The boys, it is said, have made a business from Arthur Hall on an employe of the Short Line. Yesterday, upon leaving the court of the Mining Exchange building, it is said that they made a number of attempts to sell the wheel, which is the property of Hall. The boys confessed the theft last night to Chief Adams.

The boys, it is said, [illegible] over the affidavit [illegible] to the district attorney for prosecution.

Within the last [illegible] bicycles have been stolen in the city this summer. Chief Adams decided that he would have to put the case in the hands of the district attorney for prosecution.

SICK PEOPLE PRAISE WORK OF HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

Officers of the El Paso County Horticultural society are daily receiving letters of gratitude from sick persons of the city who have been recipients of floral favors from the society. This feature of the society's work is broadening in scope every week, and it is desired that the contributions of flowers be increased. Flowers may be left at the basement of the court house on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings, when they will be immediately distributed to the sick through the agency of the society.

LABOR DAY IN COLORADO SPRINGS

NO FORMAL CELEBRATION WILL BE HELD—BAND PICNICS ARE PLANNED—STORES WILL CLOSE.

Colorado Springs will quietly observe Labor day tomorrow. The banks and many of the business houses will be closed all day, and barber shops will close at 10 o'clock. A number of people from Colorado Springs will attend the celebrations at Denver and Pueblo. Picnics will be the chief entertainment for those who remain in the city and its vicinity. Excursions will be run by the railroads to many points of interest. One of the chief local events of the day will be the carpenters' picnic at Stratton park. Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver will be the principal speaker. The Odd Fellows will give a picnic at Clyde which will probably attract a large representation from the city. At Cascade, a picnic will be given under the auspices of the Caledonian society, and about 100 members and their friends have planned to attend. A number of informal gatherings have also been planned. In the evening the Midland band will give its regular band concert at North park.

NEW TELEPHONE NUMBERS IN USE

Hundreds of mistips occurred over the telephone wires yesterday as a result of the change in numbers which has just been made. The new directories were distributed yesterday and the new service put into effect.

In the entire new book there is not one Colorado Springs phone number with an "A" or a "B" attached. There are a few lettered telephone numbers in Manitou, but there are none for the Springs or Colorado City subscribers.

The new system promises to be popular with subscribers, as there has always been a great deal of confusion under the old system.

All of the offices and guests rooms at the Antlers hotel are now on a private branch telephone exchange.

MARRIED—Justice O. R. Dunnington yesterday married Samuel C. Roslyn and Elsie Sedlmayr, both of Denver, and Louis Morgan and Marie Dumouly, both of Colorado City.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF COLORADO SPRINGS AND COLORADO CITY WILL OPEN TUESDAY

Enrollment Will Be Larger Than Ever Before---Corps of Teachers Increased. Work of Year Outlined.

The public schools of Colorado Springs will open for the year on Tuesday of next week with an outlook for [illegible] in their history.

The Colorado City school will also open on Tuesday of next week, but those of Manitou will remain closed a week longer, opening on Wednesday, September 12.

Prior to the opening of the Colorado Springs schools, the annual teachers' meeting will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the High school. This meeting will be open, not only to the local teachers, but to teachers from other places who may be in the city and to the public in general. Many topics of general interest will be discussed. Addresses will be made to the various members of the school board, and by Superintendent John Dietrich, who will also make a number of announcements and will point out the assignment of teachers for the coming year. Miss Ella Hayes, a talented violin player of Kewanee, Ill., will give several selections. Already the larger number of the teachers have returned from their vacations, ready to resume the work of another nine months in the school room.

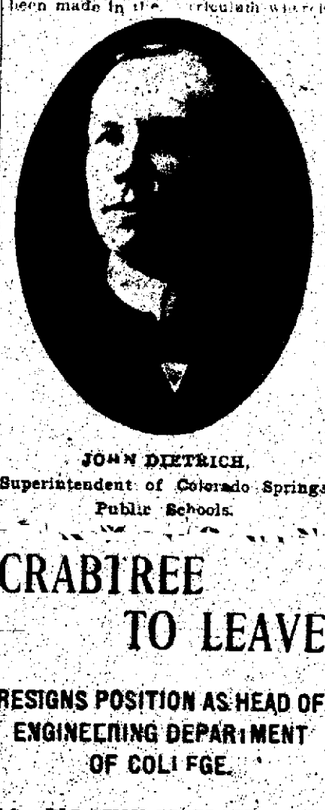
All resident children of school age, from six to 21 years, will be admitted to school free of tuition, and nonresidents by the payment of the stipulated fee. Classes will be organized in all departments, and pupils will report to the principals of the buildings nearest their homes for assignment to their schools.

All indications point to an unusually large attendance. At the offices of Superintendent Dietrich there have been numerous inquiries from people who have moved into the city within the last few months. Many of these give as their reason for coming to Colorado Springs, the excellent educational opportunities which it possesses in its public school system and Colorado college.

The High school will have the largest enrollment in its history. It is expected that during the year the figures will reach the 800 mark, nearly double that of six years ago.

There will be a few changes in the course of study. The number work in the lower grades will be reduced, there being very little number work in the first grade and much less than formerly in the second, but beginning with the third, arithmetic will be emphasized. The time formerly devoted to it in the lower grades will be given over to more thorough work in reading, language and nature study.

A new feature this year will be the inauguration of the free kindergarten system. One kindergarten is to be established this fall and it will be at the Lowell school. This kindergarten will be free to the children of the Lowell district between the ages [illegible]



JOHN DIETRICH,
Superintendent of Colorado Springs Public Schools.

CRABTREE TO LEAVE

RESIGNS POSITION AS HEAD OF ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT OF COLLEGE.

ACCEPTS SIMILAR PLACE WITH CARNEGIE INSTITUTE AT PITTSBURG LOOKING FOR ANOTHER MAN.

Announcement was made at Colorado college yesterday morning of the resignation from the faculty of Professor Fred Crabtree, head of the mining engineering department. Mr. Crabtree has accepted a similar position at the

PROF. FRED CRABTREE.

Carnegie institute in Pittsburg, Pa., and his resignation comes as a surprise to his many friends in this city.

During his two years of service he has shown great devotion in the organization of the department of mining at Colorado college, the offer which has been made by the Carnegie institute, however, is of so flattering a character that he has finally decided to accept it.

It is a high compliment to the local engineering school that the noted institute, endowed by Carnegie's millions, should look to Colorado college to fill one of its most important positions.

President W. F. Slocum of Colorado college, who recently returned from a trip abroad, is now in the east giving his attention to the selection of the successor to Professor Crabtree. Several prominent candidates are in the field for the vacancy. Much depends on the choice of a strong man, for President Slocum, realizing the strategic position of Colorado Springs as the place for a school of engineering, will spare no effort to enlarge the work in this department along practical lines and to make it one of the leading schools in the country.

MRS. GREENLEAF GIVES INTERESTING LECTURE

One of the most instructive and interesting lectures ever heard in Colorado Springs was given by Mrs. [illegible] M. Greenleaf, of Los Angeles, on Victor Hugo's great novel, "Les Miserables" in the Antlers ballroom last night. The audience was composed largely of prominent society people of Colorado Springs, the lecture being given under the auspices of the Boys club, of which Mrs. J. F. Sanford is president.

For a number of years Mrs. Greenleaf has been lecturing on "Les Miserables." At the beginning of her lecture last night she explained the value and influence of literature upon life. She then spoke of the eagerness with which people read and listen to stories of life and the "ilons of life." "Sociologists think that they have made a discovery when they find that love conquers evil, but Jean Valjean learned that a century ago," she said. The lecturer then gave a number of the more dramatic scenes from the book with which most readers of Victor Hugo are familiar and have learned to like. Among these scenes were following: [illegible] gives Jean Valjean the candlesticks; Jean Valjean as mayor of M[illegible]; rescue of the drowning sailor; Jean Valjean escapes Inspector Javelt; Jean Valjean loses Cosette; death comes and with it, love, home and memory.

Mrs. Greenleaf has a number of friends in this city. She will leave tomorrow for Salt Lake City, where she will lecture.

Mrs. F. E. Boynton and daughter have gone to Long Beach, Cal., for the winter.

STAMP SALES HEAVY; ALL RECORDS BROKEN

The month was a record breaker in the sale of stamps at the local postoffice. The total sales amounted to $30,[illegible], as compared with $[illegible] in August, 1905.

In the sale of one-cent stamps, which is taken as an indication of the number of tourists visiting here, the month of August recorded the largest number in the history of the postoffice. More than 210,000 one-cent stamps were sold. In July, 150,000 were sold, this being the record until this month.

Sales at the postoffice have steadily increased each month this year, and the general average is 10 per cent better than during the same period in 19[illegible].

REGISTRATION SETS RECORD

Number Also Includes Many Voters Who Have Moved Into Precincts.

While in an alleged drunken condition, Al White, a young man connected with one of Manitou's hotels, loosened a vicious left swing on Police Officer Jim Davis' jaw yesterday which nearly put the officer in slumberland. Recovering from the effects of the blow, Officer Davis succeeded in flooring White and landing him and his partner, W. M. Wade, an employe in a local furniture store, in the patrol wagon. It is thought that White and Wade are fictitious names, and that both young men are well known here. Charges of drunkenness and resisting an officer have been placed against both of the men and they will be held in jail until Tuesday.

PROF. MILLIGAN GETS GOOD PLACE

HAS BEEN APPOINTED SUPERINTENDENT OF MONTANA SCHOOL FOR DEAF AND BLIND.

Prof. L. E. Milligan, for the last three years teacher of the advanced classes in the deaf department at Colorado School for the Deaf and Blind, has been appointed superintendent of the Montana state school for the Deaf and Blind, located at Galder, Mont. The Montana school, although comparatively new, is one of the most progressive in the country, and Mr. Milligan's appointment is a high honor and a fitting recognition of his ability. He will leave Colorado Springs today to accept his new position.

With the exception of Professor Milligan, whose position has not yet been filled, the local school will open its fall term next Thursday with the same faculty as that of last year. Superintendent W. K. Argo leaves for about the usual attendance, which is 150.

HISTORY OF AMERICA IN SONG AND STORY

Miss Charrille Runals told the "History of America in Song and Story," at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium last night to a large and appreciative audience. Miss Runals combined the art of song with speech in telling of the different movements in American history from the landing of Columbus in 1492 to the twentieth century. Among the epochs taken up by the speaker were the landing of the Pilgrims, the Revolution, the War of 1812 and the Civil and Spanish-American wars. Miss Runals was assisted by Miss Varian C. Poole, pianist.

This afternoon at 4 o'clock Miss Runals will speak to men only in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium on "Black Rock," Ralph Connor's tale of the Selkirks. She will sing a number of Scotch melodies, among which are "Blow, Ye Winds I' Morning," "Will Ye No Come Back Again," and others.

COL. C. F. HUNT A FORTY-NINER VISITS THIS CITY

Colorado Springs has as a guest one of the few surviving '49ers. He is Colonel Charles F. Hunt, a wealthy cattleman of E. Paso, Texas. Colonel Hunt is a personal friend of Constable W. P. Wyllabee, with whom he is visiting while in Colorado Springs.

As a boy, in '49, he crossed the plains and came to Colorado, where he made his first residence at Chilili, Colo., now Gray Creek, three miles south of Trinidad. After two years spent there, he went to New Mexico, where for 21 years he was engaged in the cattle business. Then he removed to El Paso and to Chihuahua, Mexico, where he now has extensive interests. His present headquarters are El Paso, and he is rated one of the wealthiest cattlemen in the Lone Star state.

Colonel Hunt is a unique character, and acknowledges himself as "a freak from Texas," in that he is "a lone Republican in the Lone Star state." He says that the atmosphere of Colorado, where Republicanism is in the air, is clearer.

Colonel Hunt's son, Ralph, is buyer for Henry Fink, on the Charter Oak ranch at Boone, Ark., and it was on a visit to his son that he came to Colorado.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 2, 1906.

ALREADY GAINING.

IT IS GRATIFYING to the friends of Mr. Philip B. Stewart to note the reception accorded to the announcement in The Gazette of his candidacy for Governor. The form of his announcement, following as it did by only a few days the letter setting forth his views on the coming platform, has excited general discussion, and has already given him a distinct lead over his competitors. People like to know where a man stands; Mr. Stewart has told them in very plain terms. His refusal to commit or pledge himself in advance, except to do his best, and his conception of the governorship as an office whose duties are to be met as they arise, and not beforehand, are favorably received. He is now without doubt the strongest of the three candidates in the field.

Almost equally gratifying, in one way, with the favorable reception of Mr. Stewart's candidacy by Republicans, is the manner in which the Democrats and their allies have already directed the full force of their abuse upon him. The News-Times, and their jackal, the Chieftain, have opened in full chorus. He is a corporationist, they say, he is the head of a trust company that floats watered stock, he is the boss of a gas and electric trust, he has the promise of getting the flotation of some of the new Tramway issue for his company, and so on and so forth. Before the campaign ends we may expect far worse stuff than this. Some of the Welton street fakirs have imaginations which have been abnormally developed, and nothing is too ridiculously improbable for them to try to foist on the public. If they were not afraid of him, and did not consider him the strongest candidate on the Republican side, they would not thus distinguish him by their abuse.

Now a word to those of our readers who have not had good fortune to know Mr. Stewart personally. He is not going to travel in the campaign as the political friend of the President; but it must be admitted that no man can be a close friend of Theodore Roosevelt who is not thoroughly clean, honest, and high-minded. No man can be a thorough believer in the Roosevelt policies, as Mr. Stewart is, who is a "corporation tool" or a "trust hireling." Mr. Stewart is a fearless man—he will talk right out in meeting, and tell the voters just what he thinks. They may agree with him or they may not, but no one who has heard him will fail to grant him the courage of his convictions, or deny that he is straight and square. He is a candidate that will grow during the campaign. The more people who see and hear him, the more votes he will get; and after that, the more they know of him the better they will like him. He is the kind that wears well.

We are living in a day of new things; new political issues confront us, our outlook should be forward, not backward. This is no time for either national or state affairs to be put into the hands of old political hacks on a platform of old political grievances. People have ceased to care for the "crime of '73." It is a good time for new blood. With Mr. Stewart for leader, the party in this state will march forward steadily and fearlessly in the path of progress and prosperity.

JUDGE GABBERT'S CANDIDACY.

CHIEF JUSTICE GABBERT of the Supreme Court has issued a statement to the effect that he is a candidate for reelection, and will be in the race till the polls close. He does not say whether he will go before the Democratic convention, but that is a fair inference, for he has always been a Democrat, with Populist leanings, and elected originally on the Populist-Democratic ticket. From the latter part of the statement it seems fair to infer also that if not nominated by the Democrats he expects to run as an independent candidate.

There has been some talk of having Judge Gabbert nominated by the Republican convention, but it is altogether improbable that this will be done. In some states, New York for example, it is a custom for both parties to renominate a judge who has given satisfaction, regardless of his political faith; but the custom has not obtained in this state, and as it seems very doubtful whether the Democrats will nominate Judge Gabbert, it is certainly not incumbent upon the Republicans to do so.

In his own party, it is needless to say that Patterson is bitterly against him, and will prevent his nomination if possible. Adams is probably almost as bitter as Patterson, for it was the action of the Supreme Court two years ago in taking jurisdiction of the election in Denver which caused the capture of the Big Mitt, and sent a number of its members to jail for contempt.

Judge Gabbert has done good service on the bench. His decisions, we believe, have been rendered in strict accord with his conscience. It is said by the Patterson crowd that he is a tool of the corporations, but his decisions have not shown any such thing. In fact, no less than three of the most important ones have been against the corporations—the Flat Tax law, the Employers' Liability law, and the Eight Hour law for public employes. As for the election of two years ago, it is only fair to assume that Judge Gabbert took the part he did, not because he had become a Republican, but because of a high sense of his duty to the state. It would not be complimentary to him to affirm that he should have a "gum" a Republican reward now for having done his duty then.

If the Democrats put legal training, ability and impartiality ahead of partisanship in selecting a candidate for Supreme Judge, they cannot do better than renominate Judge Gabbert. If they want a tool of Patterson on the bench, or a judge who is committed in advance to decide every corporation case that comes before him against the corporation, then they will name somebody else. There need be no doubt what they actually will do. When such men as Mullins and Lindsey are seriously talked of as candidates it shows the temper of the party. To its present frame of mind even so radical a man as Judge Cunningham is likely to be too respectable and conservative to suit them.

BRYAN'S NEW "CONSERVATISM."

A WEEK AGO we ventured a prediction that Mr. Bryan would before long dissipate the idea which some Democrats have been insisting on of late, that he is a conservative. We did not think he would do it quite so soon or so thoroughly as he did last Thursday night, but he certainly made a complete job of it while he was in action.

The Constitution of the United States has never been amended since the days of "the fathers," except as a result of the Civil war. It is very difficult in time of peace, and while the nation is under no special stress, to get an amendment passed. Scores of them have been proposed, and some of these have got through part way, but now they are wrecks on the sands of time. Notwithstanding this, Mr. Bryan cheerfully proposes two new amendments—one to shorten the time between the election of a House of Representatives and their assemblage for business, and the other to validate an income tax.

But this is nothing to what follows. He wants absolute free trade, because he thinks that would "bust the trusts." Apparently he would not have Congress undertake the job of knocking off all the duties, but he proposes a novel plan which is certainly enough to make Thomas Jefferson turn in his grave and revisit the glimpses of the moon. This plan is to vest in the President the right at any time, upon becoming convinced that an article on which duty is levied is coming in competition with an article made by a trust, forthwith to remove the duty and put the article on the free list. That is, he would make the President absolute dictator of the business world, with power to make or break, to kill or resurrect. The disturbance to business is great when Congress undertakes to revise the tariff in the regular way; but think of the uncertainty and panic that might result from the sudden action of the President, whom Mr. Bryan would invest with the power to change the tariff radically at any time—every day if he chose! What will the "safe and sane" think of this proposition?

And even this is by no means all. Mr. Bryan wants the national government to own and operate through railway lines, and the several states to own and operate the lines within their own borders. He has given a hint of this before, but never has come out so plainly for it. He did not go much into detail, so we do not yet know whether he proposes to have the government acquire the present lines by purchase or confiscation or build new competing through lines of its own. The latter is suggested by his reference to the case with which the government might build a transcontinental line from New York to San Francisco.

Still further, Mr. Bryan lays it down as a principle that in general, the government should own and operate whatever there is no competition in—that is, that it should become a giant trust of all the trusts. If this principle is to be followed out to its logical conclusion, we shall hear—we hope not see—some very queer things in this country in the coming few years.

Possibly in order to prevent the necessity of the government going too largely into the trust business on its own account Mr. Bryan proposes legislation for the license of corporations, the President, at his discretion, having the power to revoke or withdraw any license, when he has reason to believe that the particular corporation holding it is doing more than ten per cent of that kind of business in which it is engaged.

One very admirable quality about Mr. Bryan is his honesty. He told his people, from the other side, that in some respects he is more radical than he was six years ago. They would not believe him. Now he has certainly proved what he alleged. After this, anyone who can call him conservative has no sense of the meaning of words.

Colorado Comment

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

From the Salida Mail.

Upton Sinclair's labors have proved one thing that most people knew before—that it pays to advertise. Over 2,000 men have applied to the government for the job of inspecting the meat packers' operations.

COLORADO IS PROSPEROUS.

From the Glenwood Post.

Colorado is enjoying such prosperous times that it will be mighty hard for the demmies to get a foothold this fall. The people are so well satisfied with the administration of Governor McDonald and his associates in the state house that it will take more than the wail of "Alva the Martyr" to turn them aside. They are quite content to let well enough alone.

CANTALOUPE CROP SMALL.

From the Fowler Tribune.

The cantaloupe campaign this year will not be so large as usual. The increased acreage of beets has curtailed to some extent the usual area of melon culture. Besides this some damage by hail to the cantaloupes has been experienced on some farms down the valley. These conditions may enable the melon grower to command a better price for his product in case his goods are first class and fair dealing can be had with commission firms.

THE DOUBLE FARE OUTRAGE.

From the Fowler Tribune.

The trolley line between Colorado Springs and Manitou is kept quite busy during the tourist season. For years this tramway company has been grafting upon the people. Four fares are charged from Colorado Springs to Manitou and return. The same extortionate rates are charged to Stratton park and return. It is reasonable to suppose that the same rates could be charged in the larger cities where long distances are traveled on the trolley lines for one fare. Some of Tom Johnson's Cleveland street car policy may be good for western cities.

PEACH DAY AT GRAND JUNCTION.

From the Salida Record.

Peach day in Grand Junction this year will be Thursday, September 27. Advices from the committee in charge of the annual fair, which will be held from September 25 to 28, say that the Grand Valley this year will produce the largest fruit crop in its history. This fact following the almost complete failure last year will be received with great satisfaction by the people of this vicinity who depend entirely on the Grand valley for their peaches. Let everybody who can go and celebrate with the fruit growers on Peach day. The railroads will provide low rates.

Ten One Hundred Years Ago Today

Tuesday, 2d September.—Married at six o'clock halted at ten, and at two o'clock on the side of the Creek our route having been all the time on its northern bank encountered by a young Indian who informed us that Mr. Chouteau had arrived at the towns. I conceived it proper for me to return, which I did, accompanied by Baroney, first to the Little village where we were accompanied by The Wind to the Grand village, where we remained all night at the lodge of Chaveu Blanc. Mr. Chouteau gave us all the news; after which I scrawled a letter to the General and

Press Opinions

NATURE THE GREAT HEALER.

From the Detroit Free Press.

In the new system of therapeutics it is as essential that disease be prevented as that it be cured. Nature is the healer and if given proper encouragement it has been discovered that she will right the wrongs committed by ignorance and misunderstanding. If we know of no drug that will heal affected lungs we have learned that right living will prevent the lungs from becoming affected and we know that in the incipient stages fresh air will work a cure. It is singular that the most destructive of all diseases should be curable or preventable by the simplest, cheapest and most readily obtainable of all remedies. And yet it is necessary to drive this simple fact home to every individual in the land by the adoption of an elaborate system of education and the expenditure of vast sums.

THE CAPACITY FOR WONDER.

From the New York Evening Post.

In the boyhood of all but the youngest of us an air pump was a matter of curiosity; today our offices and apartments are cleaned by the vacuum process. We can recall when there was something awesome in the tiny spark of an electrical machine; now in rainy weather the discharge from the trolley slot illumines a whole street unnoticed, and our offspring amuse themselves with wireless telegraphy. The capacity for wonder has thus become jaded. It still exists, for it responded nobly to the sensational discovery of liquid air and the X-rays; but it requires some spectacular and rather valueless demonstration to give a fillip to the suted imagination of an age to which the marvelous has become the commonplace. When science serves us in our daily life, we perforce assume towards it that hopeless attitude, that possibly inhuman lack of curiosity, with which we accept the daily miracles of our butcher and baker.

CHECK ON NAVY RECRUITING.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Just at a time when the navy is in such dire straits for recruits as at present it is unfortunate that so many cases of discrimination against navy seamen, and merely because they are navy seamen, should have to be recorded. Every ship now in commission is undermanned and the navy department is at its wits' end to devise ways and means of enlisting recruits and retaining them in the service once they are enlisted and trained. These acts of discrimination against the uniform do not tend to counteract the most earnest efforts of the recruiting officers. The recruit expects and endures much discomfort and actual hardship as a matter of course. He does not expect to be marked out as one with whom his fellow Americans can not associate and to be excluded from public places to which he would be welcomed were he not in uniform. This is barely to place a penalty on patriotism.

SECRETARY ROOT'S SPEECH.

From the New York Evening Post.

Mr. Root talked at Buenos Ayres very like an anti-Imperialist, and an old-time believer in republics, democracies, and self-government. He talked with warmth and grace, and his praise of the Argentine Republic was thoroughly to the point. That country is justifying our American faith in the ability of peoples to govern themselves, precisely as the Filipinos will after they have had a fair chance, and citizens of the United States who follow South American affairs have taken great comfort in Argentina's remarkable prosperity. As an ambassador of good-will and friendship, no one could have done better than Mr. Root in all his speeches thus far. But, unfortunately for the practical side of his mission, his lips are sealed on one subject. He cannot hold out to South Americans a prospect of closer trade relations. He cannot say to them: "By means of reciprocity treaties and otherwise we shall now seek to have close and mutually profitable business ties with you." He cannot forget, if he would, that McKinley and Hay, after negotiating a reciprocity treaty with the Argentine government, were forced to see it rejected by the senate, and that the bold Roosevelt has not had the stomach for a contest with the stand-patters, on this or any other subject.

BITES HAND THAT FEEDS HIM.

From the Durango Evening Herald.

Charles S. Thomas is a pretty specimen to howl about corporations. Thomas has made his money from corporations.

BACK WITH THE SPOILS.

Redick correspondent (Lake) Signal.

Albert Thibodeaux returned from Church Point Sunday, bringing a young lady with him, who he introduces as "Mrs. Thibodeaux." Congratulations, Albert!

ITEMS IN EDITOR WILLIAM A. WHITE'S PAPER.

From the Emporia (Kas.) Gazette.

Mr. Stotler's lost their driving horse last week.

Mr. Evan Rees hauled hogs to town Friday of last week.

Jim Spillman made his usual call at Burlee's Sunday evening.

Doyle Spellman hauled hay to town last week.

EDITS JUST AS HE IS.

From the Triplett (Mo.) Tribune.

Some newspaper men are expert hot air gunners, and when they make their debut in a town turn loose the Vesuvius batteries, shelling the community with dream pellets. We come here without a plumed circus band, heading a glittering gold bespangled parade with an air splitting whistle in the rear, but with fifteen years' experience in country newspaper work, a fairly clean laundry character and an ambition to make a respectable living.

MR. SHOEMAKER FURNISHES A COUPLE OF ITEMS.

From the Grindstone (S. D.) Bee.

Alex. Shoemaker returned from Pierre last week with a heavy load, but the horses were not hauling it.

Alex Shoemaker is busily engaged in putting six new shingles on his palatial home. It improves its appearance greatly and shows the gentleman's interest in our beautiful little city. Let the good work go on.

LIGHTNING CAPERS IN GEORGIA

From the Adams (Ga.) Enterprise.

Lightning snapped in twain a big pine tree in half on Tuesday last. In the half that fell to the ground a bee gum was found, from which one of our citizens got seventy pounds of honey.

Lightning hit two niggers and four mules on Thursday. The mules died, but the niggers recovered, and have gone to preaching the gospel.

Lightning hit the widow Ing on one of our leading streets one day. A rain, and the shock cured him of the rheumatism.

TWO MOUNTAINS.

By Ella True Conner.

A-lookin' at the mountains, it always seems to me
You can't help seein' this old world more like it ought to be.
There is calmness an' right-thinkin' hangs roun' their purple peaks.
Sometimes when I'm all worried out it seems they almost speaks.
An' says: "Be quiet, now, an' wait till God
Brings things about.
There ain't no use a frettin so, an' wearin' yourself out."
Whatever the hurt can't be helped just face it like a man."
Is what the mountains says to me—a teachin' Nature's plan.

Now we can't all be preachers, I couldn't anyhow—
I've got no knack o' saying things an' never had, I low.
But still I've got a right good ear for hearin Nature talk,
An' there's nothin' like the mountains when the old world seems to balk.
She's a quickly stubborn critter when she gits a bad spell on,
That's when I gits out my old staff an' paddles off alone
Away up in them stubbly pines, where I can stretch, and see
How little all this turmoil is! It makes me feel so free.

On pleasant Sunday mornin's their very looks is praise
Then I take my old staff again, an' tramp a little ways
Up in among the canons an' hear the waters roar—
It's always tellin' somethin' that I never heard before.
Now, there's an old verse somewhere that runs on kinder still—
"Who shall ascend Thy mountains, Lord? an' climb Thy holy hill?
Them that has clean hands, an' pure heart," them old peaks says to me.
An' when I get home all the world's more like it ought to be.

There's nothin' like the mountains!—an' take them when you will—
With the first daylight on 'em, all rosy-like, an' still;
Or when the sun just lights 'em up until they look like gold;
Or when the storm cloud rushes down an'—clasps 'em in its fold!
I like 'em best when purple mists are swathin' them about.
An' here an' there the grand old peaks are kind o' lookin out.—
It seems as if some dear old friend you loved when you were young
Was kind o' smilin' down at you, and beckin' you to come!

But lookin' at 'em, night or day, it always peaks to me,
You can't help seein' this old world more like it ought to be.

HOBBIES.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

We are told to beware of a man with a hobby. We are warned that he is likely to hold us with his eye as the Ancient Mariner held the Wedding Guest, while he rides his hobby over us and generally conducts himself as a bore. It is quite true that some men are bores. There are two kinds of bores, men who have hobbies and men who have not. Of the two, the one who has a hobby is less a bore than the one who has not. Don Quixote and the Antiquary are good instances of men with hobbies, and if they are bores let us have an empire of boredom. There is reason in everything if we only knew it, and there is a great deal of reason in hobbies. In fact, some hobbies are decidedly desirable and may make all the difference to a man between sanity and insanity. For hobbies are not manias. They are those pursuits which we follow with the most enjoyable zest and energy.

Nay, we will go farther. Every man should have a hobby, and a hobby totally distinct from his daily work. Every woman, also, perhaps; but the wise differ upon the advisibility of consorting with a woman with a hobby. An old proverb says that change of work is as good as a rest. That may not be strictly true, but there is a good deal of common sense at the bottom of it. To go on hour after hour, to let the hours grow into days, to let the days extend into weeks and the weeks into years, at the same daily task, on the same dead level of existence, is to court the attention of a commission in lunacy; and if we escape that, it is the high road to poverty of mind, however it may fill the purse. Here is where the hobby comes in. It is the best means of relaxation, and relaxation is necessary, for the bow which is never unbent soon loses its elasticity. What relaxation is it to go home after a day's work, eat a meal, sit gazing into vacancy, or rush over the place at a speed which would astonish you during the daytime? Get a hobby, instead of sitting still or rushing about, and you will soon find the benefit in both body and mind.

Of course, there are sensible and senseless hobbies even a fool knows that—and a sane person will choose a sensible one. There is such a wide choice that every man can find one suited to his taste and pocket book. But let us not make a mistake. A wealthy man may desire to possess pictures, engravings, china and a thousand other things. If he merely gives an order to a dealer and then places his acquisitions in his "show room," he cannot claim the freedom of the noble society of men with hobbies. A hobby is something on which, from sheer choice, we spend energy, care, affection.

People often laugh at those who make postage stamps a hobby. Really the laugh is on the other side, for the collector spends time, energy, and positive shrewdness on his scraps of paper, keeps the mind interested, enjoys the pleasure of possession, cultivates the faculties of observation and arrangement. Numismatics is much more sensible, it is true, and possibly it is not more expensive. Autographs, too, are a desirable hobby, for they possess that individual human interest which philately and numismatics do not involve. Only the autograph collector is frequently a nuisance.

On hobbies like these you may spend and be spent, but there are some which are entirely uplifting. Think what it would mean to you, to anyone, to steal out of the city at times and collect plants for a herbarium, various forms of insect life, land and fresh water shells, and the like. The advantage of hobbies like these is that they compel you to live in the open air, they train the eye to observation, they quicken the mind with logical classification.

Life would be ten times gay, a hundred times, if we can measure the comparison happier and more enjoyable with hobbies instead of follies before us. You may rely upon it that the man with a hobby gets far more pleasure out of life than he who has not one. Even if this were not so, there is still that suggestion of Doctor Watts about Satan and idle hands. Get a hobby and ride it for all it is worth, and keep yourself out of mischief.

Doing Things Well

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

ALLIANCE at comparative athletic records or at the annals of almost any sport, industry or flight of human endeavor discloses a most surprising and encouraging tale of wonderful progress. The people who play golf today have developed more skill and accuracy than those who played a decade ago. The bowling average and general proficiency in the several games of professional billiards show a quite remarkable advance over the performances of the predecessors of the present players, and also over the former achievements of these players. It is truly wonderful how great has been the increase of skill in baseball. People who care nothing for the game itself are nevertheless fascinated by the marvelous alertness, accuracy and power displayed by the professionals and amateurs of today.

The same progress is observable in almost every direction. Compare the ordinary circus of today with the circus of the past: there is no comparison. Not only children, but highly intellectual men, can find matters of surprising interest in the modern—the very recent—mastery which animal trainers exercise over the most intractable and ferocious, the most untamable beasts. The modern trainer teaches the seal to juggle a ball on the end of its nose; he will play with lions and tigers; he will wrestle with a Polar bear; sit at table with bears, lions, tigers, leopards and dogs, and eat with them while they are all ridiculously perched on chairs or stools.

The admirable thing about these exhibitions is the unmistakable evidence which they furnish of the most wonderful skill of the trainer; his courage and steadfastness over a long period; his almost infinite patience. It may appear to the unthinking that there is nothing very useful in all these pursuits and games; but everything is useful which furnishes to men striking examples of human skill and power, and encourages all men to higher effort by showing them that human powers are capable of constantly widening and increasing development. Men who exhibit the evidence in the useful arts and sciences perform a double service by showing us the extent of human powers and by pushing forward upon the avenues of positive, beneficent achievement.

One of the most valuable examples of the kind is to be found in the case of two or three physicians of the same family in one of the western states. The genart public has scarcely heard of these men, but every physician and surgeon of eminence in the world who follows the course of medical progress knows of this wonderful and inspiring family and their remarkable work. Were it not the actual fact, it would be almost incredible that an obscure village in a far western state, far removed from hospitals and large populations, with their medical colleges and museums and medical societies, is known the world over as the place where the highest peaks in surgical progress, and especially in the conduct of a surgical hospital, have been scaled. Yet eminent surgeons from Vienna, from Great Britain and from Paris go to that little town and sit as pupils at the feet of these wonderful men; they go as students to observe the best methods, and as patients when they need the highest skill in certain cases. What is responsible for this remarkable triumph by two or three men who were ordinary country physicians and surgeons not so very long ago? The natural answer would be that the men are geniuses, possessing marvelous skill as surgeons. That would not be correct. The surgeons are skillful, it is true. There are other surgeons in this country and in Europe who are probably just as skillful, but never anywhere in the world has there been according to competent judges, a hospital conducted with the success which has come to the small private hospital of these men, who give a part of the fees to a charity in which they are interested. The hospital has surpassed the most famous hospitals, possessing unlimited resources in treating certain cases, and the success is due to the utmost thoroughness in every detail and to the high degree of skill and care which the heads of the hospital have insisted upon in every department from all the physicians, attendants, nurses and employes.

When a patient enters the hospital he is subjected to the most rigid examination by highly qualified specialists. Every suspected organ is examined, and when the chemists and pathologists diagnose his case, and when the diagnosis has been confirmed, the surgeon who performs the operation is assisted by a thoroughly trained physician of long experience and known skill in this particular work instead of by the temporary assistant of many hospitals, where the office of assistant is filled by rotation every six months or so.

While the operation is being performed the pathological expert comes into the room, takes a specimen of the tissue, rushes to his laboratory, freezes the specimen and reports, even while the operation is going on, whether or not the tissue be malignant or diseased or in any way abnormal.

The greatest names in medicine in the world pay tribute to these surgeons, who were but a little while ago country physicians, traveling up and down a valley, and they all declare that the great secret of the splendid results, which cannot be gainsaid, are due to the surgeons' love for their work, to their intense, conscientious devotion to their profession, and especially to the extraordinary thoroughness and care bestowed upon every detail of hospital management, from nurse to chemist, from diagnostician to surgeon.

The skill of these men is, of course, now very great; but the one thing which distinguishes this institution from many others, or, according to medical authority, from all others in the world, has been the determination to do things well—positively all things as well as it was possible for the directing heads to do them or to have them done.

Consider for a moment how great and glorious has been the success reared on this foundation of thorough and conscientious endeavor. The surgeons have won a personal success which is the highest triumph in a calling which is doing work for humanity, and in doing their work well they have established new standards of excellence for the world in one of the noblest and most useful fields of human labor.

TO THE AMERICAN HEN.

(Poets may sing of the glory of the eagle, but the American hen that can equal the production of all our mines is entitled to a tribute for her industry.)

Oh, let the country pin
Its faith to you; oh hen,
And it will surely win
The seads that glad all men.
You beat the fruitful vine
When on a record lay,
And so your fame must shine
Forever and a day.
All patriots may dream,
While looking on your hackle
With joy supreme;
The eagle's scream
Is beaten by your cackle.

The painter'll paint you soon
In purple, gold and green
Against a misty moon
Upon a lacquered screen;
And laureled bards will join
Until the blue dome ring,
That you upon the coin
May yet outspread your wing.
Oh, hen, you lay by steam,
And when the job you tackle
All shout ahream
The eagle's scream
Is beaten by your cackle.

Oh, bird of boundless joy,
And cashful industry,
You make all care a toy;
That's beautiful to see.
Oh, long enjoy your day
That is a day of gold!
Lay on, oh hen, and may
You ne'er be laid out cold.
With wondrous vim agleam
You make all song and quackle
Like six cents seem—
The eagle's scream
Is beaten by your cackle.

—Puck.

WHICH WAS "ED?"

When the late Senator Wolcott first went to Colorado, he and his brother opened a law office at Idaho Springs under the firm name of "Ed Wolcott & Bro." Later the partnership was dissolved. The future senator packed up his few assets, including the sign that had hung outside of his office, upon a burro and started for Georgetown, a mining camp farther up in the hills. Upon his arrival he was greeted by a crowd of miners who critically surveyed him and his outfit. One of them, looking first at the sign that hung over the pack, then at Wolcott, and finally at the donkey, ventured:

"Say, stranger, which of you is Ed?"

LAMB'S STUTTER.

Charles Lamb stuttered, but always in the right place, as when he went to buy cheese (the story may be quite untrue). The shopman offered to send it home. Lamb inspected it. Then he asked for a bit of string. "I think," he said, "I think I could l-l-l-l-lead it home." But the proper conduct of a stammer is, of course, embodied in a Limerick, for Limericks cover all time and all existence:

Said the old man of Ahinger Hammer,
Who was blessed with a wife—and a stammer:
"The plague of my life
Is my w-w-w-wife,
D-d-d-d-d-d-d-dammer!

GOLD $—LIES IN THE NORTH.

According to Consul G. E. Ravenal, of Dawson, a gold-dredging epoch is dawning upon the Klondike.

The rich, easily discovered creeks methods been worked over. They are now being subjected to another, more scientific, treatment. A prominent feature of the new system is gold dredging. It has proved eminently successful in the Klondike in spite of such drawbacks as difficulties of transportation, high costs of installation and operation, frozen gravels and short seasons. Gold dredging in the north has passed the experimental stage and become an established and promising industry. Extensive areas of low-grade ground which have been lying idle, because under the former manner of mining the cost of extraction would equal, if not exceed, the returns, are being made productive through the use of dredges handling 3,000 or more cubic yards of dirt every twenty-four hours.

There are now in the Klondike, either in operation or in course of installation, nearly a dozen gold dredges. Next season will witness the arrival of several additions to the northern mining fleet, some of which will be put to work in the Fortymile and Birch Creek districts of Alaska. All of these "gold ships" are of American make. Occasionally it is said that dredges from other countries may enter into competition with American patterns. Such reports are probably idle and merely the result of impatience because American manufacturers can not at present fill all orders promptly. Calls for gold dredges come from California, Montana, Idaho and Colorado. Gold dredging is to be tried in Siberia and in the valleys of the Yalu, the Amur, the Hoangho and the Kangtse. The present inability of American dredge manufacturers to supply the demand is perhaps chiefly due to Panama canal requirements.

COLD STORAGE FOR HAY FEVER.

Here is a cure for hay fever that may not come too late for the susceptible victim of that fell malady. The Hospital relates that a gentleman who was a sufferer from hay fever happened one summer to spend two hours in the refrigerating hold of a steamer. This cured him and he had no further attack that summer. As a remedy "cold storage" has objections, but there are victims who would even be cured at the expense of a frozen foot or fingers, and at any rate the idea is refreshing. Those of us who enjoy novelty, and always the "last thing," might rush for the refrigerator the instant we begin to feel that hay sneezing coming on.

NOT HOUSEKEEPING.

From the Philadelphia Press.

"So, you're married, eh? I hope you've got a good housewife."

"Well," replied the young benedict, "she's only been a fashionable hotel wife so far, and I but as hog is to continue so."

Among Men who Work with Hand or Brain

Why Order Clerks Struck

By Irving C. Jackson.

THE order clerks in the wall paper department of a certain great mail order house recently quit work in a body. It wasn't that they didn't like their places. It wasn't that they were dissatisfied with their pay, with their hours, with their work, or with their prospects for the future. On the contrary they knew that they were paid as well as any other order clerks in the city, that their hours would be bettered nothing by a change, that their work was easier than that of most men in their line, and that their chances for advancement were as much better than that of the average wall paper worker as the firm for which they worked was greater than the average firm of its kind. Still they quit. They couldn't stand the foreman.

The manager made a specialty of listening to the complaints of all employes. He also investigated just why each employe left the firm. He called the departing order clerks into his office.

"Boys," said he, "I understand that you've asked for your time. What's the matter, got an offer from some other firm?"

They told him they had not, that they did not know where they were going, didn't know if they were going anywhere, but they did know that they couldn't work for that firm any longer, not while that firm was represented by the present foreman.

Foreman Was Too Autocratic.

"Why, what's the matter with him?" asked the manager. "Tell me your troubles. Of course we back up our foremen, but you get a square deal."

Then they told him. It wasn't that the foreman didn't know his business. On the contrary he knew it so well that he wouldn't permit anybody else to believe that they knew anything. He was the brains of the wall paper room, they merely were the hands that executed the brains' directions. Because he was foreman he had ruled down to the smallest item.

"Now, Mr. , you know no man who knows his work can stand for anything like that," said the spokesman of the men. "There's got to be a foreman, of course, and he's got to be the whole works and be bo and all that. But he don't have to be a slave driver just because he is foreman. He's got to have the whole say so where he's running things, and he's responsible for the work of the force; but he can't treat his men like they were a lot of kids who don't know anything. That kind of thing don't go. Why, this foreman would call a fellow for stopping to tie his shoelace. And when there wasn't anything to do for a few minutes he'd holler at the whole gang because they didn't chase around and pretend to be scared of him and make a bluff at working. Then if a fellow made a bull—and anybody will make 'em, I don't care how good he is, he'd get a calling that would send you crazy. It's too much for us to stand; we got to get out."

Boss Was Asked to Resign.

The manager said: "You boys just stay with us another week, while I look up things. Then I'll see whether you're wrong or your boss is. Go back to work, and remember that you're going to get a square deal, and nothing more."

At the end of the week the manager had in his hands reports concerning the work of the wall paper department before and after the advent of the present foreman. These reports showed that there had been no increase in the work done per capita and that the number of errors had increased 25 per cent. And errors in filling orders are the bane of the mail order house. The manager called in the foreman.

"Blank," said he, "what's your idea of a foreman?" The foreman was at a loss for an answer. "Is it a man who runs his department strictly according to the best interests of the firm or one who regards his position as foreman as advantageous simply because it gives him an opportunity to play boss? Apparently the latter, Blank, you aren't cut out to be a foreman, at least not here. I guess you'd better resign."

The great trouble is that there are too few managers like this one and all too many foremen of the stripe described. Too often the head of a firm backs up his subbosses blindly and in full confidence that what they do is right.

Destroys Efficiency of Workers.

An autocratic man in a position of authority over other men can destroy the efficacy of a working force just as surely as a proper man can aid and develop the men under him, gain their confidence, and secure for his firm the best work that is in them.

His position gives him the power to do this. He is the firm to the worker. Through him speaks the voice of the powers that be; upon his orders and directions is the work of the department carried on.

Undoubtedly the first great fault of the subboss is that of being "too bossy," as the vernacular has it. This always is the sign of the small man elevated to a position of some importance. He desires to run things down to the smallest insignificant detail. He is jealous of any hint of independence on the part of his subordinates. He is The Boss, and he doesn't want anybody to make any mistake about it, either. So he bosses his men until they hate him and work only as necessary, and their lack of ambition results in lost opportunities to them and lost service to their employers. The manager has confidence in him and decides that it is the men who are inefficient.

Worker Has No Chance.

The man of autocratic tendencies is the most easily prejudiced of men. Any suspicion that a certain man may lack proper respect, even fear, for him, instantly reveals itself in the form of petty persecutions and tyranny. Again, a mere personal dislike may have the same effect. Thus the worker can be made to appear in a bad light to those who have in their hands the power to promote or set back; and seldom has he any chance against his superior. He may fall dismally simply because of this superior's unwarranted prejudice.

Every large house has this type of subboss, and most workers know him well to their sorrow. He presents a real, tangible obstacle to the worker, but upon the upward climb. That the obstacle has failed of acknowledgment by those who lay down rules for succeeding makes it no less serious. Most obstacles can be surmounted by conscientious effort; effort avails but little against this. It is a case of the bushel and the light, with the light in no position to throw off the thing which so effectively hides it.

Should Boy Go to College? Famous Men Give Reasons.

By Nathaniel C. Fowler Jr.

SEVERAL representative professional and business men were asked to answer the following questions:

1. Why would you advise a boy who intends to enter a profession to graduate from a classical college?

2. Why would you advise a boy who intends to enter business to graduate from a classical college?

3. Why would you advise a boy who intends to enter some mechanical trade or business to graduate from an institute of technology or other high scientific school?

The following counsels and opinions were the result:

Jacob Gould Schurman, president of Cornell university:

"In my judgment, the chief reason why a boy should take a college course is that it will expand his horizon, multiply his interests, enable him to take his bearings in the world, and, in general, make a larger man of him."

By the Governor of Massachusetts.

The Hon. Curtis Guild Jr., governor of Massachusetts, and editor of the Boston Commercial Bulletin:

"I think I can answer your questions precisely in the following single paragraph:

"Gov. Russell once said, 'It is important that Americans should remember that they have not only to make a living, but to make a life.'

"Technical education almost is a necessity for making a livelihood in the present highly developed condition of all the industrial arts. If the republic is to succeed, however, American citizens must be something more than cogs that turn vasily in a machine. A man with no knowledge of history, literature, or languages necessarily is without knowledge of the governments that have gone before, and of the ideals that lift a nation from mere commercialism. To the technical education should be added a liberal education, that the successful business man may be also the valuable citizen."

The Hon. Carroll Curtis Boggs, justice of the Supreme court of Illinois:

"I do not think that either in professional or business life the fact that one is a graduate or has a degree will be found of always practical benefit. A classical education is desirable—all learning and knowledge is so—and if a young man can complete a classical course and his professional studies by the time he has reached his twenty-fifth year, he should do so; but I think every man should enter upon his life work not later than at that age, and that it would not be advisable to remain longer in the schools in order to graduate in a classical course. This I believe to be true of either a professional or a business life.

"The knowledge to be obtained in an institute of technology would be useful to every mechanic and every business man, and probably would be almost a necessity in some of the mechanical trades."

Needed for Sake of Community.

William E. Huntington, president of Boston university:

"A young man who is expecting to succeed in any one of the 'professions' in the coming time should have the liberal training of a good college, both for his own sake and for the benefit of the community he is to serve.

"The same may be said of a boy who is to go into business. If he has a good mind and wants to make himself of most possible use in the world (not simply in his business) he should go into life with that mind well furnished and disciplined.

"Even for a mechanical trade a boy should have as broad a training as possible. Technical schools are doing fine work to train eye and hand, as well as mental faculties, for high grade work in trades."

Success Means More than Money.

Harry Pratt Judson, head professor of political science and dean of the faculties of arts, literature, and science, University of Chicago:

"1. I would advise a boy who intends to enter a profession to graduate from a classical college, because, in my opinion, the mental and moral developments derived from such a course are of value, entirely aside from the specific knowledge needed for the given profession.

"2. The same considerations I think apply to the young man who desires to enter business. Business means much more than the sure, full conduct of a specific occupation. The business man who has wide sympathies and who comes into contact with life at many points is qualified to be a business man of the highest type. Moreover, success in business means more than success in making money. It should mean also success in using it, so as to get the largest satisfaction out of life and so to be a most efficient member of society. A thorough college education, I believe, will conduce toward these ends.

"3. An institution of technology will enable a boy who intends to enter some mechanical trade to be far more efficient in his work and better fitted to cope with the higher lines of his employment than would otherwise be the case."

Clearer Light and Broader View.

Prof. William Libbey of Princeton university:

"First, I should advise a boy, who intends to enter a profession, to graduate from a classical college before taking up his professional studies, because of the broader view of life that he will receive, and also clearer light as to the relations of his own professional work to the other branches of knowledge.

"Second, I should advise a boy, who intends to enter business, to graduate from a classical college before doing so, because of the more concise habits of application he will acquire if he attends to his duties faithfully.

"Third, I should advise a boy, who intends to enter a mechanical trade, to graduate from an institute of technology, or even a classical college, before doing so, because of the maturity he would gain by such a course, which would enable him to rise faster than he would otherwise."

THEODORE LORCH & COMPANY AT OPERA HOUSE THIS WEEK

The Russian actor, Theodore Lorch, supported by Miss Josephine Deffry and his own company of players, in high class repertoire of eastern successes, will be the attraction at the Opera house all this week commencing tomorrow evening. The plays will be changed every day. They will give three matinees during the week on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The matinee prices will be 25c for adults 25c. Evening prices 25c and 50c. Their opening play evening will be a romantic Russian drama, "A Soldier of the Empire," followed by the [illegible] plays of Tennessee [illegible] Missouri, [illegible] Rip Van Winkle, Jekyll and Mr. Hyde and Lady of Lyons." The [illegible] company is highly [illegible] at popular prices and many of these plays have been seen here at the above prices. An exchange has the following to say about the star, Theodore Lorch, the star, is an actor of unusual power, and a man of strong and magnetic personality. His changes from Jekyll to Hyde and the one great change from Hyde to his better self, were accomplished with wonderful rapidity, care and great effect. His facial expression is thoroughly under his control and admirably adapted to every mood which he portrays. In his dual part last evening he played the gamut of the emotions of an intense, intellectual, ambitious man, saddened to death by the power of evil which had passed his control, and he struck no note that did not ring true. He has a fine stage presence and a most admirable mastery of dramatic technique."

EXCELLENT OFFERING AT THE EMPIRE

The management of the Empire promises that the presentation of Gilbert's one ring circus, the greatest trained animal act in the world, including goats, monkeys, dogs, horses and ponies, will be the public act worthy to bear the name of the sensational novelty which played last week. This act is truly an innovation in vaudeville, and as one sits looking at the performing animals in a miniature circus ring, one becomes oblivious of the surroundings and imagines a full-fledged circus is in full operation.

The Kings, billed as refined novelty artists, have a very unique and entertaining wire act. Their stunt is so unlike other acrobatic wire acts as to warrant its being termed a high-class comedy sketch. The McIntyre sisters, singing and dancing comediennes, are pleasing entertainers.

Otto Jeancon, who is making the hit of his professional career singing illustrated songs, promises to render a ballad this week that will eclipse anything thus far produced.

The moving pictures are excellent. The overture, "Mooning," will be rendered. It surely looks like a very good bill.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The date for the annual Anti-Cigarette league field meet, which is the principal athletic event in which the grade schools of Colorado Springs take part, will be set at a meeting of the executive committee of the Anti-Cigarette league on Saturday, September 15, at noon. It has been customary for the A. C. L. to hold two meets annually, but the committee may decide to hold only one meet during the coming school year. The first meet will probably be held during the early part of October.

A number of the boys of the Y. M. C. A. will meet this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the "den" with J. G. Arnold, secretary of the Boys' department, to arrange plans for the Sunday afternoon boys' meetings to be held during the coming year. The Rev. I. J. Heizer, assistant pastor of the First Presbyterian church, will address the boys. Dwight Sisco and Frank Chejey, who recently represented the association at the annual Boys' conference at Lake Geneva, will tell of their trip and of the conference. At the close of the meeting the boys will attend the entertainment given in the auditorium by Miss Runals.

A meeting of the active members of the Colorado Springs Young Men's Christian association will be held in the association parlors Tuesday evening for the purpose of electing six new directors.

Joseph W. Erps, of Waco, Tex., who recently accepted a position with the Colorado Springs Y. M. C. A., arrived in this city yesterday to begin his duties. Mr. Erps comes highly recommended and is said to be one of the most competent physical directors in the south and middle west.

Mrs. Mittie Brooker and little daughter, Janie, have returned from California and are visiting Mrs. Brooker's sister, Mrs. George L. Walker, 219 North Institute street.

REV. C. P. CROSS WILL ARRIVE ON SEPT. 12

The Rev. C. P. Cross, who has been assigned by the Colorado conference as pastor of the First M. E. church, South, of this city, will arrive here from his former charge at Atlanta, Tex., on September 12, and will probably assume immediate charge of the local church.

The Rev. James C. Rawlings, who has been the Colorado Springs minister for the last four years, will leave this city the latter part of this month for his old home in Kentucky, where he will spend a six weeks' vacation before going to northern Texas, to which district he was assigned by the recent conference at Denver. He will not receive his new appointment until November.

A Thrilling Scene in a Poker Game

Four Veterans Against Quartet of Jacks Cause Suspicion of Cheating

From the New Orleans Times

"At a little town called Cow Pond in southern Arizona a few years ago when I was taking in some of the sections of the recently built Southern Pacific railroad I witnessed a scene which for force and intensity goes far beyond the most thrilling climax in any lurid melodrama that I have ever paid the price of admission to see.

Ham Moss grows gray in the railroad business and in the waiting room of the Cow Pond station a few nights ago and between train times entertained a policeman and the writer with yarns of the old days.

"There were the usual number of train hands half a dozen greasers and tame Apaches a fair sprinkling of professional gamblers and three or four bad men the worst of whom was Hank Belden said to have a private graveyard of his own and known throughout the district as a quick puller and a dead shot.

"I'd been in the place a week or more, wishing fervently for a chance to go east again when I made the acquaintance of Walter Doely. Doely was a young fellow from southern Illinois and although he hailed from a Yankee state and his folks did too his father had fought under the terrible Morgan as one of the intrepid confederate leader's raiders.

Possessed of Gambling Passion.

"The elder Doely, as Walter told me, was a Methodist clergyman with a church either at Cairo or some other place near it. I don't just remember where, and the young man had come west with a party of engineers who were prospecting for a firm in Wall street.

"Doely was a fine manly chap and associated with few people at Gila Bend. Not that he was proud or haughty, but he was usually a melancholy sort and fancied me because I was a bit gloomy like myself sometimes. Doely had one fault, he loved to gamble and his favorite pastime one evening in the week was a try at poker down in the Silver Horn saloon. One Saturday night I strolled into the joint and saw Doely sitting at a table under the flickering glare of a bum lamp, playing poker with two greasers and a man whose back was to me when I entered the door.

"I was surprised on walking around the table to discover that the player with his back to the door was Belden. A bad man doesn't generally take such chances. It is too easy for an enemy to enter and plug him full of lead before he knows it, but when I looked closer I saw that Belden was taking no chances. He on the wall opposite to where he sat was a big looking glass the first of its kind in Gila Bend I reckon, and by glancing into the mirror the desperado could see every one who passed the front door.

Shows Effects of Liquor.

"Belden, looking up from his cards, nodded casually to me and Doely greeted me warmly and asked me to take a seat and wait for the next round of drinks which he was going to pay for. The round made up of the foulest kind of firewater such stuff as used to set the Apaches on the war dance when they got too much of it, came and another followed and I noticed with uneasiness that my young friend from Illinois was getting a bit husky in voice and a little wabbly in motion. Every time he'd throw down his cards I could see his body lurch and sway first to one side and concluding that he was well under the influence of liquor, I tried to persuade him to give up the game and go to the quarters.

"Belden cast ominous glances in my direction when I suggested to Walter that it was time for him to turn in and, not wishing to have a run-in with such a notorious gun fighter, I became less insistent, especially as Walter himself seemed bent on playing all night.

"The two greasers who hadn't entered with much spirit cashed up soon and the game was between Belden and Doely. Doely had about $50 worth of chips and raked his pile on, three kings. In the draw he got another and turning to me borrowed all the money I had in my pocket at the time—$25—to bet on his hand. Belden coolly took the $25 bet and on the call threw down four aces.

Challenges the Youth.

"Doely stared in surprise and quick as a flash cast it up the balance of the deck and ran through the pasteboards to see whether there were any more aces among them having the idea doubtless that Belden was cheating. Belden looked across the table at his late opponent and such a cloud gathered on his face as I never saw depicted on a human countenance before. Black rage and offended pride were combined in the expression and the rugged bearded face was transformed into that of a demon.

"Belden half rose from his chair leaving his winnings neglected on the table before him and leaning across the table placed his right hand on his holster shoved his face close to Doely's and said in slow words fairly hissed: 'So you think I'm a skin do you?' All right. I'll kill you with."

"Doely, not a bad looking young man of eighteen up to that time, drew back in his chair. His hands with fingers wide spread over the mass of cards were on the table so Belden could not see if a gun was drawn under cover but Walter's face instead expressing fear and anguish in the instant became rigid, the lines about his mouth deepened and the flush in his dark cheeks faded to a pallor and a sentiment.

Doely Shows He Is Game.

"'You've got the drop on me Hank and Walter's voice, every natural did not tremble in the least, 'and if you feel like shooting shoot and be hanged to you but if you want to give me a fair deal thank you for it, I'll go you.'

"Doely slowly arose from his seat, placed the chair close to the table and turning his back on Belden walked to the center of the room where he wheeled around and faced his enemy with arms folded across his broad chest. 'With a minute Hank' he cried keeping his arms motionless and his right hand away from his holster. 'There is no use to endanger any innocent lives, let's give Ham here a chance to vamoose.'

"Belden still standing at the table, his hand on the butt of his revolver, said nothing but only looked at Doely, and as his arm dropped to his side he remarked: 'You're game young fellow, and I like to see such grit as yourn. You ain't got a chance with me in a gun-pullin match, cause I'd have my popper out and a piece of lead in yer head before you think and I'm going to even up matters. See these cards here?' running his hands carelessly through the mussed-up deck. 'Well, we'll pile 'em up nicely an' then you an me'll cut 'em. The man that gits the low card stands up again the wall an' lets the other fellow take a shot at him. Are you game for that?'

Doely Cuts Low Card.

"'Any way you say will suit me,' was Doely's cool return to the daring proposition. 'You're square, so am I; let's get to the business and be through with it.' Walter walked over to the table and gathered the cards up in a neat pack and placing them in the center of the table stepped back and said: 'You cut first, Hank or shall I?'

"'No difference to me' the gun fighter said. 'I'll cut, though to start the fun.' Those two desperate men, each as brave as the bravest, were in deadly earnest in their stirring acting and neither quivered so much as an eyelash or went a shade paler. Hank took the cards in his left hand and lightly let them fall one on top of the other back into the original position. Then he cut and held aloft a queen. 'It's a high one to beat, boy,' he cried. 'Have your try.'

"Doely a smile of unconcern playing about his lips, bent over the table and took the top cards off the remainder of the deck. It was a four of diamonds, and my heart dropped into my boots. Doely looked at the card and saying never a word whisked the thing over the counter behind which the barman still crouched, and then he quietly walked across the room and stood, drawn up to his full height, with his back against the wall.

Refuses to Take Life He Won.

"'I'm ready for you, Hank,' he remarked in his usual tones, and, heaving a sigh of disappointment, waited for his death and watched its approach unflinchingly. Belden strode to a position directly in front of Doely and, pausing about ten yards from the man, whose life by all rules of border chivalry belonged to him, surveyed the unmoved figure. It seemed to me that Belden must have stood there undecided for a full minute and then he said: 'I've put quite a few fellers away, but even if folks do say mean things about me behind my back I always killed fair. I can't do no butcher biz 'cept like this. Say you didn't seem I was a skin, jes let's shake hands.'

"Doely stepped from the wall and as he grasped Belden's half-extended hand he muttered: 'I know you're not a skin a feller to act like this can't cheat at cards and if I offended you I'm sorry.' And so the thing ended and down in my heart I fervently thanked God, because I liked Doely and I knew that no such Hank's match at any style of fighting game, unless it was with fists. We had few more drinks and separated, and I never saw Hank Belden again. I heard afterward that he was killed by some sheriff in New Mexico while resisting arrest for a cattle-rustling deal."

MISUNDERSTANDING.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The new girl at the summer resort was letting her arm hang idly over the side of the boat and dipping her fairy fingers in the cool, rippling water.

"All this sort of thing is new to me," she said. "How do you do when you hook a big fish?"

"You have to play him with some skill," answered the girl who was handling the oars. "Don't let him have his head too much. Yield a little to his impetuosity, but keep a firm grasp. Accept his presents, such as candy and the like but—"

"I was speaking of a real fish, you mean thing!" indignantly exclaimed the other.

A PUBLIC BATH IN STOCKHOLM.

From Social Sweden in the Craftsman.

The useful and the beautiful go hand in hand in Sweden, everything bears the stamp of the artistic. The central public bath in Stockholm is in a park, the interior is decorated in green the right shade of lavender and white, the little dressing rooms are daintily furnished, the swimming pools bordered with palms and growing plants with a little island of them in the center and on the top floor are two large halls for indoor tennis dances or other public amusements.

STRUCK TROUBLE AT ONCE.

From the Chicago Tribune.

Scarcely had the Russian emigrant set his foot on the soil of the New World when sounds of a dire conflict assailed his ears.

"What is it?" he asked. "Has a reign of terror been let loose here, too?"

"Why," answered his former neighbor and compatriot, who had met him at the steamer dock, as with blanched face he hurried him to a place of safety, "it's a gang of rooters for the Giants mobbing an umpire!"

The Original Rooster

Habits of the Jungle Fowl Are Seen of All Kinds of Hens Are Being Studied in Every Part—Rare Little Birds from the Distant Himalayas Attract Thousands of Visitors—The Hen in History. Known in China 3,000 Years Ago—Incubators Used in Egypt When the Pyramids Were Young.

BOSTON, Aug. 30.—The answer to the celebrated question "Why is a hen?" may be discovered this summer by those who visit a modest collection of fowls maintained as part of a miniature zoo in the Middlesex Fells reservation of the metropolitan park system of Boston. Not that any considerable number of the thousands of Bostonians and strangers from every section of the country who alight from the Boston Elevated company's cars in Medford and Melrose and make the delightful trip through the great forest park established by the efforts of the far-seeing Elizur Wright the celebrated insurance expert and who peer into what seem to be ordinary chicken coops at the reservation headquarters on the shores of historic Spot pond, are aware that among the domesticated fowls there present are half a dozen of their great great great grandfathers and grandmothers, many times removed. From the beautiful little jungle fowl of the East Indian wilds to the useful bird of our barnyards it is, so to speak, a far cackle in point of time although the outward differences between the original and some of our ordinary bantams are so slight as almost to defy detection by the ordinary layman.

Not so many of these bright colored bantams as they appear to be have ever been brought to this country it is said, and the sight of half a dozen in the fells picking up grain, grasshoppers and maggots along with defined varieties representing no one knows how many centuries of cultivation, is one to suggest speculation as to the long course by which leghorns, Plymouth Rocks and all the other innumerable chickens which lay several hundred million eggs annually in the United States, ever came to be.

For the average American, however, he may survey with pride the well-plumed chanticleer in his barn yard—or his back yard—is not usually ready with an answer to questions regarding the origin of a fowl whose early rising habits have called a hundred, perhaps a thousand, generations of men from their downy couches. He knows about eggs and dressed poultry and possibly a little something which he ought not to know about the fighting qualities of different breeds of gamecocks but the explanation of the long processes by which hundreds of different types have become fixed to such an extent that only through human neglect will they revert to their original type—why, even after two generations of Darwinism there are plenty of people who don't know what is meant by selection natural or artificial.

Not all the "whys" can be answered, anyway. Just by what processes of artificial selection each variety of fowl has been established is not a little obscure. The historians of our race have generally been more concerned with recording the battles of human gamecocks than the evolution of egg-laying breeders have had practical, though never until recent years, scientifically accurate, knowledge of the laws governing the establishment of distinct varieties. Most of the breeding that is to say has been done instinctively. Some men in every community readily note differences in points among fowls of the same brood, and are quick to decide what points they want to emphasize. Without any fine-spun theories, they breed for those points by choosing the individuals which correspond most closely to their ideals and mating them, a process which is continued generation after generation until a new type has become fixed.

This, of course is all there is to it, a simple, easy demonstrable principle, although most people outside the fraternity of breeders of poultry horses, stock and other human assistants have no conception of the remarkable results that have been achieved, sometimes within a very few years. The improvement of the gamecock—one of doubtful value to humanity—is indirect illustration. In some parts of this country and particularly in several of the southern states, a process prevails of farming out a large number of roosters together and allowing the better fighters among them to triumph over the feeble. The strong perpetuate their kind so that generation after generation an increasingly doughty class of fighting cocks is evolved. The men in this nefarious business having a certain end in view, are able to produce varieties which have the abbreviated comb, sharp spurs, and general lack of appendages easily fastened upon which are desirable in fighting fowl. In exactly the same way the more useful types the great layers and good broilers have been established by fanciers working slowly, patiently, toward a given end.

Far as many of the varieties of the present day have traveled from the Gallus bankiva, or original jungle fowl, which is now on exhibition in the nucleus of what is expected to become Boston's big zoo, the preservation through all courses of experimentation of some of the primeval characteristics is very apparent. The jungle fowl looks like a little hen. When it and the red-breasted game bantam are exhibited in the same cage the layman is puzzled to tell which is which. They behave alike. They do not fight with one another more than would be expected of any two scions of different breeds.

Comparison is usually made with a bantam rather than with a full-sized rooster or hen. That is only fair, since the smaller variety is necessarily more of a size with the original jungle fowl than are the great creatures fattened for the market. The bantam, of course, it should be explained, is not any separate variety, but represents a condition that can be established in any variety. Did you ever think how these little fellows are produced? They can be created from almost any type of fowl by selecting the hatchings that come late in the season, taking the smallest of the resulting chicks, feeding them scantily through the winter, and continuing this process for several generations until a race of hardy dwarfs has been produced. In this of the red-breasted fowl a bantam is reached which looks surprisingly like the little fowl that is the great grandfather of the whole clucking family. [illegible] is [illegible] feathers of the tail, though the close observer will also see that the primary feathers of the jungle fowl are a little longer than those of his domesticated cousin. He is, in fact, somewhat nearer to the aboriginal bird which flew and indeed, in his native habitat he does lift himself out of danger from foxes and other sly creatures of the ground. One of the natural product of the East Indian wild the other represents no one knows how many centuries of human interference with the workings of natural selection.

The jungle fowl, exhibited in the Boston park has shown, thrives surprisingly well in the climate of the southern United States. He is widespread in northern India, and lives up to a height of about 4,000 feet in the Himalayas. A detailed description shows a similarity of his appearance to many of our barnyard varieties. His comb is ample, with an irregular outline, and with narrow strengthened lobes arising from the crown. The head, back and sides of the neck are covered with long hackles of a clear, brilliant golden-orange color. Below the hackles the upper part of the back is bluish-black and the center of the lesser wing coverts are of a deep, rich chestnut. The quills are brownish black, edged with pale, reddish yellow. The tail is black with rich green and blue reflections.

The habits of the jungle fowl in captivity are not so different from those of other hens. The males have voices which are heard in the gray dawn, giving thanks for deliverance from the dangers of Renard the fox, Puss the feline, and other prowlers of the thicket. It is noted, however, that the last note of the jungle cock's crow is rather less prolonged.

Interesting though an American colony of jungle fowls is by reason of the history unwritten, but not unimportant, which its presence suggests, he is at best only a curiosity. Commercial usefulness cannot be claimed. The eggs are small and would command no great price even in the season when tubs of limewater are giving up their contents. There would be no special value in using him to cross with later varieties, or in developing new varieties without crossing. Natural evolution is rarely repeated and artificial evolution hardly more frequently. But as a spectacle in a little cage of his own he is quite the cock of the walk.

VERY VALUABLE INSTRUMENTS

Insignificant enough in the enormous property loss at San Francisco was the destruction of the instruments of the Metropolitan opera house orchestra yet musicians know what the loss of a favorite instrument means. Moreover, many of the violins were old and impossible to replace. There were lost fourteen violins five violas three cellos and four basses representing with the bows a value of about $11,000. Most of them were old Italian, French or German instruments worth, for lack of a pedigree only from $200 to $500. But in the list was a Guarnerius $1,000 a Guadagnini $1,000 a Daluglio $800, a Gagliano $500 an Amati $350 violas by Stainer Maggini Landolphi and Klotz a cello by Santa Seraphin, and a bass by the late George Gemunder. Almost every large fire or shipwreck reduces the number of the precious old instruments and brings nearer the time when only wealthy collectors can afford to own them. It is already true that only an exceptionally fortunate musician can [illegible] and the instruments of the last famous makers are also steadily rising in value.

GRUESOME SOUVENIR CARDS

Souvenir postal cards bearing pictures of two negroes as they appeared swinging from a limb of a tree on the morning after they were lynched have been mailed at Salisbury, N. C., which place apparently takes pride in the lynching. The postal cards have been held up pending a decision by the department authorities in Washington whether such things can properly be transmitted through the mails. There ought to be no doubt about the decision.

GERMANY'S GREAT SCULPTOR

Reinhold Begas probably the greatest German sculptor has just passed his 75th birthday. Two weeks before Bismarck's death Begas appeared at Friedrichsruh to get a final impression of Germany's most striking figure before beginning work on the great Bismarck monument voted by the reichstag. When Begas stated his mission Bismarck replied, "Ach, why do you want to set me a great monument." Represent me as being on crutches."

POSTOFFICE AS DEBT COLLECTOR.

A debt-collecting agency which is run as a part of the regular postal system is the newest "improvement" of the postoffice of Austria. Despite the novelty of the enterprise the plan has worked admirably so that many thousands are collected annually by the postman throughout the Austrian empire. The system is very simple. Suppose a tradesman in Vienna has an account due from a customer in say such a distant town as Budapest which he wishes to collect. Distance does not matter in the least. He merely sends the bill to the postoffice in the capital whence it is at once transmitted to the postoffice at Budapest. There are postman presents it to the debtor collects the cash and remits it to the Vienna postoffice whence it is delivered to the tradesman by postman. In the event of a [illegible] being [illegible] which of [illegible] with cash and has in the end to the river bottom and now dragging a clumsy rake at the stern of a small boat.

Minnesota As a Pearl-Fishing Center

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Minnesota is going in for pearl fishing industry. With the exception of [illegible] fisheries along the Upper Mississippi there has been a contenting in favor by those on the upper rivers between Minneapolis and La Crosse, especially on the Minnesota side of the river. Simultaneously the industry has been gradually extending to other rivers and bodies of water within the confines of the state, until at the present there is hardly a river or a lake of any size in the northern or central part of Minnesota that does not have its pearl fisheries, says the Minneapolis Tribune.

That pearl fishing is no inconsiderable industry may be seen from the fact that the value of all the fresh-water pearls produced in the United States during 1905 amounted to fully $5,000,000. Of this amount rather more than a half represents the value of the pearls that were gathered from the streams and lakes in the middle west, the Mississippi valley as it were, in the strictest sense of the name. Just what the figures were for the total value of the pearls gathered in Minnesota during last year it is impossible to say. It is a safe guess however that $1,000,000 will not cover it, and it is almost as safe to predict that inside of a couple of years the yield of the state's rivers and lakes will more than double in value.

As a matter of fact, even if the state's yield does not increase a pound in amount from year to year, the present indications are that the value of it will double and perhaps triple within the next few years. The price of fresh-water pearls is unmistakably on the rise, and pearl dealers throughout the country are unanimous in their opinion that the increase in price of 200 to 500 per cent, that has taken place in the last three or four years will be hardly a circumstance to the rise that is due for the next half decade.

Pearl as Large as Herbs.

Think of a pearl as large as an ordinary marble with a rarity of coloring that makes it impossible to be matched. Such a pearl as this was taken out of the Mississippi within a month, and has since been sold for about $70,000, a veritable fortune for William Bates, of Red Wing, the lucky finder of the stone.

[illegible] doubt there is not another pearl in existence that will compare with the one that Bates took out of a Mississippi river clam a few weeks ago. That there are larger pearls in the world goes without saying, and that there are pearls on which a higher market value is set is likewise a truism. Nevertheless, for delicacy of coloring and oddity of the finding, the Bates pearl, as it is called, is without a peer.

Pearls found in foreign countries are valued for the evenness of their coloring and the ease with which they can be matched. Thus, it is not an unusual phenomenon to find that all the pearls taken from a certain locality are marked exactly alike, and in buying pearls to be worn in necklaces and other ornaments, the principal desideratum is to get stones that match one another closely.

American fresh-water pearls however are valued for just the opposite qualities. The coloring far from being even, is most irregular, and in the general run of domestic pearls the rarity of color is the salient characteristic. As for matching American pearls, it is almost impossible to get anything like resemblance even in two stones, not to speak of the dozens and even scores that enter into the [illegible] up of the most [illegible] and tiaras.

The Bates pearl, as a typical American stone, is remarkable not alone for its size, but also for its wonderful marking. With a net diamond weight of 85 grains the jewel is perfectly round and absolutely without a flaw. The flesh-colored tinting gives a beautiful luster to the pearl, which appears opaque in the light and almost transparent and translucent when [illegible] slightly.

How Pearls Are Found.

The old story anent the formation of pearls was that they were developed inside the oyster as a protection against grains of sand and other foreign substances that had worked in between the mollusk's body and its shell. Like many another pristine theory in the world of science this explanation of the raison d'etre of the pearl has gone by the board.

The latest view on the subject is right in line with the theory of the ubiquity of germs.

In effect it is that the oyster contracts a disease, due to the presence of a microscopic insect known as the distoma. This fluke-like creature infests oyster beds and causes disease among the mollusk inhabitants that undoubtedly yields more valuable results than any other in the whole known realm of therapeutics.

The substance of which pearls are formed is a sort of secretion that is excluded from the disease-affected part of the oyster's body. Pearls have exactly the same chemical composition whether they are called fresh water or salt water, or whether they are taken off the coast of Australia or out of the Mississippi river at Minneapolis. In all cases they are made up of calcium carbonate, water and a certain quantity, varying in different pearls, of animal matter.

Pearl fishing as an industry in this country dates back but a few years. As a matter of fact, it is not too much to say that the industry is really a development of the past decade.

Ten years ago isolated fishermen eked out a hard existence along the lower Mississippi river especially in Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas. With only the crudest appliances for the work, the lone pearl hunter toiled at the hardest kind of [illegible] labor, [illegible] with mud and bugs in the dirt in the river bottom and now dragging a clumsy rake at the stern of a small boat.

Today according to recent estimates, there are 3,000 men and women engaged in an industry whose product last year was valued at upwards of $5,000,000. Furthermore the industry has reached the stage where companies, backed with plenty of capital, are in the field and at least one of these companies is equipped with a line of boats built especially for fishing on the Mississippi and equipped with suitable machinery for dredging the river bottom for the pearl-bearing oyster.

Pearl Fishing Due to Accident.

Pearl fishing in its inception was an accident and now it is a gamble.

The industry had its beginning in the discovery of a few valuable pearls among the tons of clam shells that were annually dug out of the lower Mississippi to supply the demand of the manufacturers of shirt studs and buttons.

At one time a ton of clam shells brought $8 on the shore, and a half a ton of shells as the result of a day's work was not unusual for a good man. Then the price dropped as the result of a glutted market, and nothing but the fact that pearls were occasionally found among the shells kept the shell industry from petering out completely.

Shell Industry Side Issue.

At the present time the shell industry is a side issue. The men and women, too, who are to be seen along the whole length of the river between St. Paul and Prairie du Chien industriously dredging for the hard-shelled mollusks are pearl hunters first and shell gatherers afterward. They can get from $2 to $3 a ton for the shells, but they can get from $2 to $5 an ounce for the smallest most imperfect stones they call them baroques down the river, and they can get almost fabulous prices for the best pearls.

And any fisherman, without regard to his skill or previous experience, has a good chance of "striking it rich" at any time by bringing up a pearl of great price. In fact, that is where the gamble comes in. William Bates, one of the $70,000 stone of recent fame, fished for several years with [illegible] ordinary luck and then he gave [illegible] to the game by bringing up the grandfather of all the [illegible] pearls.

And if pearls yield very big prizes, most of the members of the craft, gamblers from the ground up, will dig in and suck out the [illegible] at the work [illegible] bushel of clams and [illegible] over every mudsuck in the hope of finding "a big fellow."

Colonel Charles M. MacNeill gave an elaborate reception and ball on Friday evening at the Cheyenne Mountain Country club, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Chalomer B. Schley of Broadmoor. The appointments were of the most lavish description, yet in perfect taste.

The receiving party was stationed in the reception hall, which is so handsomely finished and furnished in old Mission style. The mantles were exquisitely banked with seasonable garden flowers and exotics. The main room, the home of the members, was also beautified with a profusion of flowers, and the musician's alcove was screened with smilax, into which was interwoven the design of a harp. [illegible] orchestra [illegible] discoursed alluring music for the reception and dancing.

The porches were lined with their soft lights supplementing the moonlight, and the effect of a forest attained by the clever arrangement of evergreens and potted plants. The south porch was set apart when supper time arrived for the guests of honor and their particular friends, and the others in attendance at the ball were seated at small tables, which appeared as if by magic.

Among the guests invited were Mr. and Mrs. D. Bryant Tarnes, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Marsden Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Whipple, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Stimson, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. EASILY CONJECTURED.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"I see you had ham and eggs for breakfast," observed the amateur detective with a far-away, inscrutable Sherlock H. Gillette look in his eyes.

"Eh?" exclaimed the man in the faded Prince Albert, frowning darkly; "you inferred the eggs, mayhap, from the traces in me beard. But you guessed at the rest, be Jove!"

"Not at all. 'Ham is written all over you.'"

"THE DITCH BOOK."

"The Ditch Book," compiled and published by T. D. Pyles, Colorado Springs. Price $5.00.

The Gazette is very glad to place upon its reference rack an addition to the reference work just coming out. "The Ditch Book," District No. 10, containing an exact copy of all decrees and complete Alphabetical List of all Statements, Ditches, Pipe Lines and Reservoirs in El Paso county, Colorado."

The Ditch Book, as its title indicates, is a compilation of all water right matters in this county. It is prepared and published by T. D. Pyles, of this city, who was water commissioner of the district from 1897 to 1903. Mr. Pyles is a recognized authority on water matters, and the fact that he stands sponsor for this publication should be sufficient guarantee for its accuracy.

The book contains practically everything that pertains to the water rights of every character in this county. It gives verbatim copies of all the decrees that have been issued by the courts of the county. The publication of these decrees in compact form is in itself alone of great importance to all who own or expect to own lands or water rights. To each decree in this book is added the quantity allowed by the state engineer, the location of the head-gate by the number of the land, the size and length of the ditch, the book and page of record in the referee's report and in the district clerk's office and also in the county clerk and recorder's office, and all other matters of record, in many instances with pertinent comments.

The statement ditches (ditches recorded but not decreed) are arranged in alphabetical order, and a complete list is given in which the name of the ditch, name of owner, source of supply, section and township and range of its head, its size, grade, capacity, date, book and page and file or record are recited, all in a concise form with the name of the ditch in bold faced type.

Reservoirs and pipe lines are arranged and treated in the same manner as the statement ditches—the location and capacity of reservoirs and pipes being comprehensively given in little space. We note in this connection that Colorado Springs's statement filings are segregated from the alphabetical list and placed together under the heading "Colorado Springs Water System," occupying four compact pages of the book. The Glen Eyrie system is also placed under its proper heading and occupies two pages.

There are three valuable charts in the book—one giving the relative position of the decreed ditches on the streams; one giving the number of decreed ditches, number of statement ditches, and number of reservoirs in each township; one locating the various towns by townships. In the back of the book there is a useful table filling three pages, which indicates the actual priority of every ditch in the district, without reference to the different streams.

A very interesting and valuable portion of the book are the articles written by Mr. Pyles on various water topics—the pedigree of Colorado ditches, the district, the streams, artesian water in the county, storage, law points, how to locate a water-right, the great need of reservoirs, water measurements, water values, the Kansas-Colorado suit, etc.

Altogether the Ditch Book practically exhausts the subject of water matters in this county—except that it does not discuss the Hydro-Electric Bugaboo. It is a book that will be in demand by the farmer and the lawyer, the seller and the buyer, the land user and the land speculator, and Mr. Pyles should have no trouble in disposing of the very limited edition which he has printed.

FOLLOWED PARSON—ABBS.

From the Chicago News.

Fools brag where wise men only admit.

Habit is stronger than either judgment or passion.

Men who beg are usually those who formerly squandered.

The man who lacks polish doesn't always lack humanity.

It isn't what a man owes, but what he pays, that keeps him poor.

After all, a woman's effort to beautify herself is but a vain attempt.

Some spinsters advance step by step until they finally become stepmothers.

Women ought to make satisfactory angels because they are so fond of "harping."

Our idea of strong will power is that of a man who can fast until he starves to death.

The scenery along the straight and narrow path is less attractive than that bordering on the broad road leading elsewhere.

POPULAR SONG OUTLOOK.

This is the season of the year when the "provincial" as those states and territories are called that pay the annual tribute to New York, have a welcomed sensation from the popular song. True, there are still the parks where one may lie the lonely waltz of the musical mayonnaise exiled from dear old Broadway. But these artists are given the cold shoulder and the favorites of the past and tired ears and memories are not jarred by their doleful cadences.

It is the newest "musical hit," the thing that clamors to get into your head in word and melody, that is worrying the old-pieces that have intermezzoed the foothills for several seasons and rather anything than otherwise. For instance as we wander aimlessly through the park of a summer night the ripple of an accompaniment floats out from the beer garden and wafted to us on the vagrant breeze comes the words:

"... and unto him these cruel words she then did softly say, with the caress of an old friend. However much we may deprecate the fact that father is still employed, we feel no resentment now when a big blonde with a ukulele valves morbly cards the unchallenged message:

... he sits around all day,
Feel propped up to the fir-re-e-e,
Smoking his pipe, etc.

But out of the east comes word that the army of song writers in "Tinpan Alley" is working with frenzied energy on the 1906-7 crop of popular songs. Already some of these have "tried out" in East side restaurants and the roof gardens. Although it is not always good to anticipate trouble, it is sometimes advisable to heed warnings. It is well to know in advance some of the impending musical infections so the shock may not be too severe.

In reviewing the present situation we find that sentiment is still the guiding light of song-composing genius. But, while sentiment has been pretty well worked over, there is a decided breaking away from Indian love ditties and coon songs, and even the tear-compelling mother melodies have been left at the post. The present tendency seems to be along lines suggested by "Kiss Me Out the Clinch, Mo Lips Are Crooked" and "I Don't Feel Till the Kissing Is Over." We have been suffering for years with a deluge of songs about roses, honeysuckles, love-lost cottages and other sweet sentimentalities, would without end. A new artistic song now writer takes up pen and ink and softly warbles: "When the Onion Blooms Again, Sweet Imogene." That ought to bring tears. As a further concession to vegetarianism we also have the soul-melting ballad: "Let Turnip Picking Time Upon the Farm," with native disregard of the well-known agricultural fact that turnips are pulled or plowed up, not picked from trees. One of the new things that burly exhibits sentiment goes back to the old, overworked mill, now grown very feeble:

While the old mill wheel is turning, I will love you, Annie dear;
Let your heart be full of sunshine when I'm far away from here.
Kiss this rose and say, "He loves me, and he'll soon be homeward bound,"
While the old mill wheel is turning, sweetheart, round and round.

But something gets the matter with the old mill wheel and it stops, and with it his love, and also, fortunately, the song. One enthusiast cannot resist the temptation to write a gloomy, sentimental thing that ought to bring applause from the gallery autocrats bearing the soulful title, "Only a Message From Home, Sweet Home." It should be explained, however, that the "Jack" referred to is a tenderfoot on a Texas ranch. He gets a letter and his cozy corner associates pass the merry quip about it being from a sweetheart. Instead of standing pat and telling a convenient lie about its coming from a correspondence school that teaches practical horseshoeing in ten lessons, "Jack" gurgles forth:

It's only a message from home, sweet home,
From loved ones down on the farm,
Fond wife, and mother, sister and brother
Praying to guard me from harm.
And baby is lisping a prayer tonight
To bless me where e'er I roam,
"We'll welcome you, Jack, if you'll only come back."
Was the message from home, sweet home.

—They should certainly quash the indictment and let "Jack" come home when he gets as bad as that.

But it isn't all crepe and calla lilies in the music market. The general melancholy is broken, even fractured, by several popular "coons." "Beat It, While Your Shoes Are Good," and "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie," are fair samples. One verse of the latter will be enough to indicate the motif:

Waltz me around again, Willie,
Around, around, around.
The music is dreamy, it's peaches and creamy,
Oh, don't let my feet touch the ground.
I feel like a ship on an ocean of joy,
I just want to holler out loud, "Ship ahoy!"
Oh, waltz me around again, Willie,
Around, around, around.

DERBY WON BY A RING.

English Classic Event of 1844 Followed by Sensational Trial.

From the Chicago Chronicle.

The history of the turf contains many stories of fraud, but none more audacious and impudent that that associated with the English Derby of 1844, which has been described as the most sensational race on record—at least in its developments. The Derby of that year was won, as the records tell, by "Mr. A. Wood's Running Rein, by Gaddier, out of Queen Mab, by Duncan Grey," ridden by Mann. The same horse had won a two-year-old race at Newmarket in the previous fall, and it was then rumored that he was a year older than was claimed, and when he romped in first in the Derby Colonel Peel, whose horse, Orlando, ran second, promptly lodged an objection against the winner and obtained an injunction against the payment of the stakes to Mr. Wood until the dispute had been settled in the law courts. Messrs. Weatherby accordingly paid the stakes into court and left Mr. Wood and Colonel Peel to fight the matter out.

Colonel Peel's contention was that the winner of the Derby was none other than Maccabbeus, a four-year-old horse bred by Sir Charles Ibbetson and thus disqualified by age for the Derby. And so zealously and successfully did he and Lord George Bentinck collect evidence that when the great action Wood against Peel came on for hearing before Baron Alderson at Westminster they were in a position to prove their case up to the hilt. Scarcely ever has a cause celebre created so much excitement.

The court was crowded to suffocation. Hundreds were unable to gain admittance and feeling ran dangerously high. After counsel had opened the case for the plaintiff the judge very sensibly suggested: "produce your horse and let him be examined by experts. That is the best answer to the whole question," and the case was adjourned for the production of Running Rein on the following day. When the next day came, however, plaintiff's counsel had to confess that the horse was nowhere to be found—it had been spirited away. Whereupon Baron Alderson was furious.

"This is horsestealing," he exclaimed, "a case for the central criminal court, and if I try the parties and they are convicted I'll transport them for life, to a dead certainty." Under the circumstances Mr. Wood withdrew his action, stating that a gross fraud had been practiced on him by his rascally trainer. A verdict was given for Colonel Peel and Orlando was declared winner of the 1844 Derby in place of the fraudulent Running Rein, exposed and deposed.

"What are you looking so happy over, old man?"

"I am rejoicing over the birth of twins."

"Great Scott! I congratulate you!"

"Don't congratulate me, go and congratulate Jones; he's the lucky man. I never did like that chump."—Houston Post.

AT MANITOU PARK

SCHOOL OF FORESTRY DOING GOOD WORK. MANY GUESTS WILL REMAIN DURING SEPTEMBER.

The weather bureau at Manitou park, the gift of General William J. Palmer to the Colorado School of Forestry, is now in full operation and daily observations are taken of the maximum and minimum temperature, the amount and kind of precipitation, (hail, rain or snow), the relative humidity of the atmosphere, the dew point, the atmospheric pressure and other data in regard to the weather. A thermograph and a barograph make continuous records of atmospheric conditions day and night. It is interesting to note that only on three days during the summer has the thermometer at the park registered over eighty degrees, while the average temperature has been sixty-one degrees.

The quiet, dignified and thoroughly satisfactory way in which the college helpers have done their work at Manitou park has been appreciated by every guest this summer. In recognition of their many kindnesses, Mrs. W. H. Leonard gave a moonlight drive last Sunday evening, which was greatly enjoyed by the college people.

Professor J. Fred. Baker, M. F., of the Colorado College School of Forestry, a graduate of the Yale Forestry school, and a trained forester, with practical experience obtained in government employ under Dr. Pinchot, is hard at work in the park gathering material, not only for the use of the students in the Colorado School of Forestry, but for experimental stations in Colorado and other states.

Last week, Dr. Burnes, resident physician at the park, shot one of the largest hawks seen in that region for several years. So perfect was the bird that Professor Baker, of the Colorado School of Forestry, is having it mounted for the museum at Colorado college.

September promises to be such a beautiful month in the park, that the management has decided to keep the hotel open until about the middle of the month.

The late arrivals at the park include the following: Colorado Springs, Prof. Florian Cajori, Dr. E. M. Marbourg, George H. Timmins, Chester M. Angell, Mrs. W. A. Anderson, Miss Woodruff, Miss Jay, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Williamson, Miss Briggs; wm. W. wareham, Baltimore, Md.; Miss Anna Cajori, Omaha, Neb.; Miss Mary J. Palm, Austin, Tex.; Dr. and Mrs. C. COLOR SENSE IN ANIMALS

Presumed to High Degree by Boys, Especially by Birds.

From the Scientific American.

A hypothesis that the sense of colors is possessed to a high degree by animals and especially by birds furnished a basis for some of the most beautiful and fecund of the Darwinian theories of sexual selection. No Darwinist doubts that the brilliant colors of male birds are to attract the attention of the female birds, and this presupposes naturally on the part of these birds a fine sense of color.

Wallace has asserted that to the fact that certain plants bear fruit of brilliant colors is due their preservation: the animals, attracted by these colors, break the fruits from the trees or plants, carry them off and thus indirectly assist in the dissemination of the seeds, which they contain over large tracts of land. And this function of selection on the part of animals presupposes in them a certain sense of color. Still, scientific documents in support of these hypotheses are rare.

Dahl, alluding to the scarcity of them in an article in a recent number of the Naturwissenschaftliche Wochenschrift, relates some interesting experiments which he made with a monkey. He colored some sweets with a certain coloring dye and some bitter substances with that of another color and declares that after a few attempts the monkey learned to love, without even tasting these articles food colored with the dye which indicated bitter-tasting substances and seized at once upon those which indicated the sweets.

Varying the experiments sufficiently, he found that the monkey distinguished all the different colors readily, save only dark blue. Dahl calls attention to the fact that Mayer has stated that many savage tribes cannot distinguish dark blue from black and that even children do not distinguish this color until later than all others.

A.—The decision has gone against me. I've got to pay Miss Weber a thousand pounds for breach of promise of marriage.

B.—My dear fellow, I am delighted. (Shakes hands warmly).

A.—What! you are delighted?

B.—Yes. Excuse my feelings, but it is impossible for me to hide them. I'm engaged to her, you know.—Pearson's Weekly.

MANITOU NEWS

With the coming of September slightly cooler weather has been ushered in, but it has caused no appreciable falling off in the number of visitors at Manitou. People continue to come and go as earlier in the season. All the hotels are planning to remain open longer this year than formerly—probably later than October 1—partly because of the Pike-Centennial and partly because of the inclination of the guests to remain later than has been their custom.

Howard Allen of Pittsburg, who with his sister, has been at the Cliff for several weeks, has returned home, leaving Miss Allen for an indefinite stay. Friday night Mr. Allen took a party to the Garden of the Gods to witness the festivities arranged for the newspaper men.

Late arrivals at the Navajo are: John C. Berry, Denver; Kate Jones, Lawton; Mrs. L. M. Jones and daughter of Kansas City; J. C. Hassler, Deshler, Neb.; Miss Eva Louden, Denver; E. and L. Graham, Topeka, and Charles H. Seamans, Chicago.

A singular maple tree on the left bank of the Oder, in Germany, is at least a century old, and has been twisted and cut into a kind of circular house of two stories. Above this is a smaller second floor, similarly formed, and the ends of the branches have been woven into solid walls, in which eight windows on each story have been cut.

TO CELEBRATE THE DISCOVERY OF PIKES PEAK

COLORADO WILL DEVOTE A WEEK TO THE PROPER OBSERVANCE OF THE CENTENNIAL

Both the Federal and State Governments Will Lend a Hand, and There Is Every Prospect of Such a Result as Will Be a Revelation to Those Who Are Unacquainted With the Enterprise and Resources of the Centennial State.

Not to be outdone by her sister state of Kansas which has just been celebrating with remarkable enthusiasm the semicentennial of the John Brown episode at Osawatomie, Colorado is about to engage in a week of festivity in commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the discovery of Pike's peak. The Pike centennial celebration is to be held at Colorado Springs during the week beginning Sept. 23, and it promises to be one of the most notable and interesting affairs of the kind ever attempted in America.

That it will be an occasion of unusual importance is made manifest by the fact that those who have been instrumental in bringing it about have succeeded in obtaining both federal and state co-operation and that congress has ordered the coinage of 100,000 souvenir medallions of silver and bronze to commemorate "the transformation within a century of an undiscovered country, peopled only by a few hundred roving Indians, into a state containing over 600,000 white men, the opening of fabulously rich mines, the building of railways, irrigation works, towns and cities, the development of complex and highly differentiated industries, the conversion of vast areas of unproductive plains into gardens and grain fields and the creation of hundreds of millions of capital."

Vice President Fairbanks, senators and members of the cabinet, Speaker Cannon and many leading congressmen, diplomatic representatives of foreign powers and patriotic organizations in great force, have arranged to be present to help celebrate the hundredth anniversary of the time when Zebulon Montgomery Pike first raised the American flag in this part of the comparatively unexplored Louisiana Purchase.

It was on the afternoon of Nov. 15, 1806, that Pike caught his first glimpse of the lofty mountain which was destined to bear his name. Four months before he had been put at the head of an expedition consisting of fifteen men and sent by the commanding general of the army, James Wilkinson, who was also governor of the newly purchased territory of Louisiana, to explore the region west of the head waters of the Mississippi. The previous season he had made a military excursion to the upper Mississippi, but had not penetrated farther.

That General Wilkinson had implicit confidence in Pike is evident from the fact that he permitted his only son to accompany the young lieutenant on his second expedition. Although several attempts were made, not a member of the company was able to set foot on the summit of the height which they had discovered. Two days after Lieutenant Pike and his men sighted the peak he made this entry in his diary:

"Pushed on with an idea of arriving at the mountains, but at night found no visible change in their appearance from that of yesterday." Seen through the dry, clear atmosphere of the great divide, the elusive mountains mocked him by their apparent nearness, just as they do the unsuspecting tenderfoot of today.

Arrived at the foot of the peak, they prepared to ascend it. For six days they struggled bravely to accomplish the feat, but it was too much for them. The weather was bitter and the men's feet were frozen. Pike made this entry in his journal:

"The summit, bare of vegetation and covered with snow, now appears at a distance of fifteen or sixteen miles. It is as high again as what we have ascended, and it would take a whole day's march to arrive at its base. I believe that no human being could ascend to its pinnacle."

It was twelve years later when the first ascent was made. Dr. Edwin James, a member of the Long expedition, which explored the region in 1818, ascended the summit with two companions, whose names are unknown. They were undoubtedly the first white men to accomplish the feat.

Although he was a good soldier Lieutenant Pike was an exceedingly indifferent prophet. His opinion of the country west of the great rivers was not a favorable one, and he had the courage to say so in his journal. "The great plains between the Mississippi river and the mountains," he writes, "are but a providential barrier which will restrain the American people from diffusion and thin. Prone to rambling and extending themselves on the frontier, our citizens will be compelled to leave the prairies to the wandering and unincumbered aborigines." Greater men than Pike stand on record to the same effect, yet the present wealth of Colorado is estimated at $2,000,000,000 and the per capita wealth of the state is put down at $2,850.

Zebulon Montgomery Pike was a native of Trenton, N. J., and for that reason the citizens of that city are taking an especial interest in the coming festivities. He was the son of another Zebulon, who was a captain in the Revolutionary forces. When he was very young his parents removed to Easton, Pa., and afterward to Dearborn county, Ind. Young Pike entered the army at the age of fifteen and was appointed an ensign in 1799. When he had reached the rank of lieutenant he married Clarissa Brown, daughter of a fellow soldier from Kentucky. The only child of this marriage who reached maturity, a daughter, became the wife of the son of General William Henry Harrison, who was afterward president of the United States.

After Pike's return from the various exploration campaigns he became lieutenant colonel of the Fourth infantry and was stationed at Washington for some time as quartermaster. He was then made colonel of the Fifth infantry and sent to Buffalo, which was the frontier in those days. In 1813 he was raised to the rank of brigadier general, but he never knew of the fact, for he was killed in that year while leading an attack on Fort York, Toronto. He was buried at Madison barracks, near Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Attempts have been made to implicate Pike in the Burr conspiracy to found a republic in the south, but without success. At the time alleged he was a prisoner in the hands of the Spanish governor of Chihuahua, having been captured while exploring Mexican territory. His commanding general and friend, Wilkinson, was accused of complicity in the treasonable plot, tried and acquitted.

PIKE'S PEAK AND ITS DISCOVERER.

THE QUAKER CITY'S ORIGINAL CAMPAIGN AGAINST CRIME

ALTHOUGH the City of Brotherly Love has in some way acquired the reputation of being the most conservative spot in America and the least addicted to sensation of any description, it has recently committed itself to one of the most radical experiments ever attempted in this country. Surgery has long cherished the theory that the tendency toward criminal development in the very young might be checked by prompt interference, but it has been left to the surgeons of Philadelphia to make the first daring venture in this direction.

The idea that criminal tendencies may be modified or even obliterated by medical and surgical treatment is not especially novel. Philadelphia, however, is the first municipality to take the matter up officially, calling on the surgeon and the general practitioner to ferret out cases of physical and mental abnormality and by proper treatment restore to them as perfect a physiological equipment as the present condition of medical science makes possible.

Much of the credit of this remarkable series of experimentation is due to the Pennsylvania Society to Protect Children and its secretary, Benjamin C. Marsh. When he was a student at the University of Pennsylvania, Mr. Marsh became deeply interested in the study of the homeless man, so much so, indeed, that when he had finished his course he made up his mind to investigate the problem for himself. To that end he became a tramp. In this disguise he penetrated the slums of all of the large American cities and also of Europe, living as a tramp and associating only with the homeless. In the course of this Mr. Marsh satisfied himself that in almost every instance of depravity, extreme ignorance and invincible poverty which was brought to his attention there existed some physical defect or abnormality. This manifested itself in various ways, some of the most frequent being partial blindness, throat trouble, deafness and feeble mindedness. This physical blemish was so universal that the question finally presented itself. Is not this a cause, or at least one of the causes, of the criminality and misery of these unfortunates? In the train of this there followed the subsequent inquiry: Would not the removal of this physical bondage by medical and surgical means create a new and healthful atmosphere for the afflicted persons?

When he had convinced himself that he had arrived at a true solution of the matter he returned to Philadelphia and began at once to advocate his theory in quarters where it was likely to take root. Finally he managed to interest the board of health, and after much deliberation it was agreed that every child that came within the observation of this organization should be given the most rigid physical and mental examination. Every magistrate in the city was asked to report children belonging to any man or woman arrested for crime and brought under his jurisdiction. Mr. Marsh's agents took charge of these children.

At this point the active co-operation of no less a medical authority than Dr. S. Weir Mitchell was secured. When this distinguished man of science and letters identifies himself with any movement there is small probability that it will fail to attract the attention of the world. The eminent specialist in nervous disorders gave his unqualified sanction to the investigation and consented to assist a board of medical experts in preparing a formula for the proposed examinations. There are now held five times a week and between 200 and 300 children have thus far been passed upon.

So it is that each child that comes within the jurisdiction of the bodies mentioned is given a physical examination by two of the health board's physicians and a mental examination conducted by an expert selected by Dr. Mitchell. Five times a week the little patients assemble in a large room at the society's headquarters and answer as best they can the minute inquiries into their physical condition. They are of all ages and seem to look on the proceedings of the health officials with the deepest awe and interest. There is more curiosity than fear in their deportment. They are stripped to the skin by the attendant nurses before appearing before the doctors, and even this proceeding is regarded by them as a part of some strange ceremony, the outcome of which may not be devoid of some thrilling adventure.

Most of these children are found to have some physical defect that may continue to develop with age and eventually ruin their lives. Although to the unprofessional eye they may not seem to be below the normal in intelligence or physique, it is a fact that not more than 28 per cent of them are found to be so. The boys lead in the column of incipient degeneracy. Of the 30 per cent of children found to be normal nearly all are girls.

The impression has in some way become current that these enterprising surgeons of Philadelphia resort to brain operations whenever the slightest mental abnormality is suspected. As a matter of fact, not a single operation of this character has ever been attempted. To cut the brain of a feeble minded person with the expectation of producing intelligence or to remove the tendency to degeneracy would be too heroic a measure even for contemplation. All of the surgical interference up to date has embraced only minor operations, the removal of adenoids from the throat or perhaps an enlarged tonsil, the correction of a simple refractive error of the sight or something equally simple and free from seriousness.

The chief business now at hand is to determine the exact condition of the children examined. When that is accomplished it is easy to proceed—to give proper mental training to the feeble minded, special treatment to the abnormally immoral and the isolation of the asylum to the hopelessly deranged.

Philadelphia's experiment will be watched with the keenest interest both by the profession and the laity in America and in all the civilized world. If it shall come to pass that the mending of physical imperfection by the aid of medicine and surgery can be made to result in the wiping out of moral degeneracy, the millennium will not seem to be a matter of such abstract speculation.

DR. S. WEIR MITCHELL.

J. Knox Taylor, the Busiest Man In the United States Treasury

ONE of the busiest men in Washington—none busier in the country, he maintains—is J. Knox Taylor, supervising architect of the United States treasury. His title sounds rather formidable, but it is actually far too short to express his real duty as sponsor for all public structures and the one skilled man in the government service who has to keep in touch with every detail of their construction and see to it that the proper material goes into them and that the work meets the requirements.

Do not imagine for a brief moment that this job leaves much time for outside diversion. Be it known also that these same government requirements are most rigid. Every stick and every stone that goes into a public structure must not only stand the test of the skilled mechanic's eye, which is usually a wide open one, but they must also be found perfect by the experts at the government laboratories.

So it happens that every minute of the night and day when a new building belonging to Uncle Sam is in process of erection, no matter how slowly the work is going on, either Mr. Taylor or some subordinate for whose faithfulness he is responsible must watch it with unflagging attention.

During the closing days of the last session of congress as if it had been guilty of a sin of omission which it purposed to wipe out at a single effort the construction of about 200 public buildings was authorized and upward of $20,000,000 was appropriated to that end. That sum and the $50,000,000 already set aside to be spent on buildings and bridges in and around Washington afford some idea of the responsibility which has been resting and still rests on the very capable shoulders of J. Knox Taylor.

Mr. Taylor is well qualified for his undertaking, stupendous as it is. This has been made manifest by his previous experience in handling big building projects for the government. He has held his present position nine years, having received the appointment in 1897. He was selected from a list of sixty applicants who were anxious to try their hand at the business. That Uncle Sam struck a bargain in the selection of Mr. Taylor has been proved to the satisfaction of all those who are supposed to understand such matters. For a salary of $4,500 per annum he renders a service that no private architect of equal ability would undertake for more than ten times that amount.

As a partial showing of the improvements made in the national capital during the last few years, most of which have been conducted under the intelligent supervision of the public architect, let it be remembered that when the senate and house office buildings are completed the plaza east of the capitol will be almost enclosed by one of the most magnificent groups of buildings in the world. The north and south sides of the plaza will be bounded by the senate and house office buildings, which are to cost about $5,000,000. The west is bounded by the imposing structures of the capitol, the eastern front of which is to be extended in marble at a cost of $1,250,000. The eastern side of the plaza will be partially filled by the splendid new library of congress, which has cost $6,820,000. The other blocks of ground east of the capitol plaza will soon be occupied by a noble structure for the supreme court. The capitol and its proposed extension, the senate and house office buildings and the library will represent an expenditure by the government of $32,500,000.

Until a few years ago the government architect was required to make all the plans for public buildings. This was found to be a source of great public dissatisfaction, and the outcry against the practice of leaving everything to the taste and architectural preferences of a single individual was very general. By the provisions of the Tarsney act, which became a law in 1904, it is arranged that while the supervising architect shall have a general supervision over both the plans and the work of construction there shall be competition between architects of recognized merit.

The treasury department, which is charged with the preparation of plans and specifications for postoffices, custom houses and all other public buildings erected by the national government, has recently issued a call for a hundred additional draftsmen in order to get out the plans for the 200 new buildings ordered by congress at its last session. The regular force of engineers, draftsmen, computers, bookkeepers, stenographers and other office employees numbers about 200, and the new recruits will add to Mr. Taylor's manifold distractions.

But he is not a man to be perturbed over an increase of responsibility. His ability to maintain a level head under almost any pressure was one of the points that led to his appointment as supervising architect. He had been employed in the office for two years and during that time had shown marked executive readiness. In the competition which the law requires before a new supervising architect can be appointed Mr. Taylor obtained a general average of only a little over 3 per cent. One applicant succeeded in gaining 90 per cent. When the decision was made, however, Mr. Taylor's experience was taken into the consideration, and the examining board, composed of leading architects from all over the Union, reported in his favor.

Since he took charge of the office every new public building has been of a classical style of architecture. In this course he has received the commendation of the best architects in the country. The history of public buildings in the old world makes it certain that those built on classical lines have survived the criticisms of ages and are now as attractive as ever. Among all the public buildings in the United States those most generally admired are classical modifications.

Mr. Taylor is an exceedingly modest man and is averse to publicity. He will not consent even to receive the praise so manifestly due to him for the increased technical and artistic perfection which now marks the work on public buildings. He prefers, he declares, to regard it as an evidence of the general advancement of architectural taste and understanding among the people of the United States.

The Latest Fashions

Various Phases of the Separate Blouse

THE TAILORED GIBSON WAIST

Sauntering in Fashion Land

The real lace mitten will undoubtedly become an imperative part of the autumn and winter bride's wedding outfit. Many of the most noted brides of the summertime followed this old-time fashion, much to the relief of the groom, the clergyman, the maid of honor and all generally concerned. That awkward pause while the bride surrenders her bouquet to the maid of honor and tugs at a glove that is, nine times out of ten, a size or so too small for her while the officiating clergyman is waiting to put the all-important ring on her finger, is altogether obviated in the wearing of the lace mitten. With the short sleeve the lace arm covering is in both taste, especially when one can secure a lace to match that of the gown, and the fingers are free to receive the ring without any preliminary fuss or confusion. Many of the summer's brides wore the mittens that their mothers wore at their weddings during the sixties and the early seventies, when real lace mittens, veils and petticoat covers were a part of every gentlewoman's trousseau, and those who have had to purchase them recently have had to pay a goodly price for similar ones.

The Baigarie crape has extended even to linings and dress shields. These latter indispensibles are shown in the shops with a frilling of narrow Valenciennes lace all around, the shopwoman sometimes explaining that in pinning the shields into summer waists tiny safety pins caught through the back avert the possibility of piercing, and thereby ruining the shield itself is avoided.

Lingerie linings of the little coats, fashioned of silks of various kinds, and enriched with hand embroideries, are offered. These are usually in a sheer lawn or batiste and are trimmed with lace edgings, pleatings, insertions and the like. They are supposed to cover the rich brocade which makes the lining for all the new wraps and to be taken out and laundered as often as may be deemed necessary. A tacking stitch at the neck and in the armsize is all that is necessary to hold them in place when to wear.

Jarretelles are shown with little fanciful coverings of lawn and lace in place of the wool ribbons, and in many instances this covering is slipped on over the ribbon casing that covers the elastic and saves the rich satin ribbon from soil.

The little lingerie corset cover that [illegible] and many of the best corsetiers [illegible] or six of such with [illegible] A fancy pin or two holds them in place, so that they may be instantly removed for the necessary visit to the laundry.

Some striped ribbons in gay colorings are being much used for neck, belt and cravat purposes. On some of the first crop of felt hats—mostly of the outing patterns a scarf is made to match the cravat and colorings, thus bringing the entire outdoor costume into harmony. Various shades of red for the ground color and vivid stripes in which gold and pale blue are prominent, seem to take best, and it must be confessed that they make a pretty splotch of color on the tennis ground, the golf links and in the brilliantly tinted autumn woods.

It is prophesied that the vogue of the pale pastel colors for tailor-made wear is to be renewed for winter wear. Last winter a few of the fashionables sported tailor-mades in pale blue, a faint gray shade and the lightest possible terra cotta, favor being distributed in about the order named. The off-color whites, too, are to be received in good company, and the faintest shades of gray and of lilac and lavender are to remain in standing. With furry accessories those delicately tinted costumes present an air of extravagance and dressiness in winter time, and with the short skirt that is worn for street purposes they do not show soil as early in their career as might be expected.

The craze for jewels and jewelry is on the increase. In Paris it is no longer considered in bad taste, or at all reprehensible, to wear imitation jewels. It must be conceded that the Parisians excel in the manufacture and mounting of those imitations, many of which are calculated to deceive any but an expert. It must not be imagined, however, that such pieces are cheap or cheap-looking. The settings are of gold or of platinum, and the mounting is done by skilled jewelers, so that, as far as the labor and skill are concerned, real jewels do not receive any better treatment.

A fancy neckpiece, a long chain of pearls, four or even more rings on either hand and a couple of bracelets is not considered any too great a display at present. And if a fancy brooch or two be added to the corsage the wearer is still well within the limits of present taste.

Society riders and riders of the [illegible] parts of New York must be taking to quite a [illegible] of reading on household topics, if one is to judge from the displays in the windows of leading book shops. Books upon [illegible] the several [illegible] ments of housekeeping, culinary hints and [illegible] furniture, house decorations and the like are prominently displayed; and the latest authorities on all of the [illegible] and other allied subjects are indicated by [illegible] cards conspicuously placed. As a general thing, women do not appreciate plain water as much as they should do. A sponge off in tepid—not cold—water when fatigued will prove more refreshing than anything else. A glass of cold water, not too cold, taken the last thing at night and another the first thing in the morning will overcome many complexion ills. When nervous a glass of plain water, sipped slowly, will prove calming. By the way, this same physician says that water, when drunk cold and quickly, acts as a depressant on the heart and nerves; when sipped slowly, it acts as a gentle stimulant.

A gallon of water daily, taken in half-pint doses, is said to be absolutely necessary to health in warm countries, and three quarts in the same period is the prescription for those latitudes. The stout woman must plan to do her drinking between meals, taking no fluids for half an hour before or an hour after meals; and her skinny sister may follow the same rule, but take even more fluids.

In washing the face with soap and water one is expected to rinse off in not less than four waters, making the last one as cold as possible and do bring it with both hands against the skin, so that a little [illegible] is drawn. This will give a [illegible] to the [illegible] which will be brought by [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible]

Popularity of the Tailored Shirtwaist

The popularity of the tailored shirtwaist for [illegible] and outdoor wear is vastly on the increase, and the [illegible] and belt worn therewith are certainly to be of the same plain and severe type. All sorts of wash materials, provided they be of an [illegible] and [illegible] weave, are in vogue, and [illegible] except in the buttonholes, is not expected. Three or four [illegible] plaits are laid on either side of the [illegible] set on the shoulder, and [illegible] for that broad line which is the accepted thing. The fastening is usually effected with buttons and buttonholes placed in the center of a stitched box plait, and stitched down side plaits serve to adjust the fullness at the waist. Most of the recent styles display a [illegible] yoke in the back, usually shallow, and with a point in the center. The sleeve follows the regulation shirt pattern, except that it is fuller in the top than were those of last season, and the stiff cuff in the inevitable wristband is in [illegible] of linen. Stock and belt are of [illegible] and [illegible] to match, a find that has [illegible] favored during the [illegible] and are sure to maintain all of its hold during the winter season.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

The Plain Tailored Shirt is Prominent—Men's Shirtings Much in Vogue—Clever Touches of Novelty Drapery—Piqué Vests More and More Extravagant—Fine Net Blouses With Colored Slips Beneath—Silk Corsets and Cords Are Very Similar—Leather Belts Are Worn Again—The Furniture a Varied Question.

With the return of the severely plain tailor suits for autumn wear the tailored plain and fancy tailored shirtwaist—the art department refer to it as a shirt, and have it made by a tailoress who has the finishing touches put into the fashion of things.

It is not so very different, this plain and fancy shirtwaist, from what it has been in the past. Pretty much the same lines and the same materials appear, although the search for [illegible] little novelty to introduce by way of relief [illegible]

One has the perfectly plain cut, with no more fullness to it than a man's shirt, upon which it is modeled, privately. Others again, equally "tailor-made" in appearance, present a number of pleats at the [illegible] and yokes are [illegible] to break the monotony of the style.

Linen is in high favor for such purposes, both the heavy German weave and the finer round-thread linens of Irish manufacture. The old reliable madras, the cotton cheviots and [illegible] is introduced in cotton also as well—and the various weaves of the ginghams and the silk imported Scotch shirtings, are all in view, as well as some of the daintiest dimities, with a tiny figure in a color to [illegible] printed on the surface at far between [illegible]

The latter cloths have attracted the most favorable attention, in spite of their price, they are [illegible] a yard in the 36-inch width. Crashes have been given to us in sheer [illegible] for [illegible] only, but dare not follow the [illegible] of fashion [illegible] by any means for half a yard of them, in different sizes, and the length of the owner to be worn out in cotton cloth, do the color of the figure that appears in the [illegible] For example, a pale pink is dainty in a [illegible] as face, and at far intervals [illegible] a tiny spot in white, conventionalized, of course, in a belt and [illegible] The monogram is worked on the little watch-pocket in a grain cotton the same tint as the dot-dash, contrasting prettily with the delicate pink that makes the background. With such shirts there are stocks and belts made up to match, although the use of white linen stocks and belts, embroidered en suite, is countenanced by clever dressers for wear with the colored blouse, that are undoubtedly giving the white waists a [illegible] for prevalent place in fashionable [illegible]

Referring to the more elaborate style of blouse, where that much overworked word "lingerie" is used descriptively, if not explanatively, it is to be noted that [illegible] importations in these are invariably fashioned with a full-length sleeve and a somewhat elaborate finish, that hangs far down over the hand, reaching well to the knuckles at first. On this side we are clinging to the comfortable, if not always sightly, elbow sleeve, and manufacturers are going on gaily putting in this abbreviated arm-covering in all but the plainest of shirtwaists. The moment that even a hint of lace or elaboration gets on a blouse the sleeve gets chopped off short, and it joins the procession of lingerie waists.

Just at this writing, in the lull that comes between the close of one season and the opening of the other, one can find exquisite examples of embroideries of all sorts wherewith to manufacture charming little blouses. There are pattern waists, done on the [illegible] of handkerchief linen, on both cotton and linen batiste and some on sheer nainsook. Technically they are known as French embroideries, but the most of them are of Irish origin, where the peasantry are skilled in needlework of more kinds than the tourist ever sees or the summer "tripper" discovers.

Just now these may be purchased for a fraction of what was demanded for them a few short weeks ago, and with an illustration to work from even a seamstress of moderate skill can make them up in short order. Odd lengths, too, of embroideries and laces are being offered at the most tempting prices. One woman whose taste is an boundless as her purse is slender takes her cosmetress along when bound on a bargain tour. The little needlewoman discovers possibilities in many a piece that her employer would pass unnoticed, and the result is that the woman is envied by her acquaintances for the number, style and originality of her gowns [illegible] in the private waist line.

[illegible] for [illegible] are not [illegible] the new waists as yet, except to a [illegible] extent. The [illegible] however, are piled up with pieces of prettiness that will appeal tremendously later on. For one thing, there are some few little points in the construction of the new models that differ from what the summer season has. Collars are higher, as though to emphasize the fact that the St. Cecilia, or Dutch neck, has been laid away with the sweet peas and sunburn and freckles. Sleeves, as already noted, are noticeably long in the imported models, and there is quite a marked difference in cut. The underarm seam is made to slope towards the front, and there is not nearly so much material at the waistline as the maker put into the summer models. The effect is one that conforms far better to the new figure, which in the most line is accentuated, the waist made to seem smaller and prettier than it did in the preceding [illegible]

And speaking of the waist brings up the subject of belts. It is to be noted that all of the best makers are furnishing their patrons with belts to match the blouse. The order has gone forth that a long and slender waist is to be the thing, and the [illegible] to match the waist aids in creating this effect. Where the belt matches the skirt—a fashion that we have followed for quite sometime—the figure is inevitably foreshortened, no matter how much sloped and pointed or how cleverly the belt may be cut. But with the belt matching the waist, in color if not in material, just the opposite result is achieved, and the figure made to look just so much taller and more slender.

In those dainty little blouses that are intended to express some degree of dressiness in their wear extravagance seems to run riot. Many of the most attractive ones are merely a mélange of laces, real where the purse will afford it, or as goodly imitations, as may be where economy be an object. Not that machine-made laces are always inexpensive, there are some of them that are quite as costly as many real laces. Two, three and even four kinds of lace, if well selected, may enter into the construction of a simple little blouse, and, in addition, an effective scrap or two of embroidery will not be amiss to accentuate the design.

Handwork, wherever possible, is to be preferred, although there are machines and attachments nowadays that make the work of the [illegible] and really very perfect and effective. But it will sigh [illegible] to tell the truth it, the [illegible] Trust, [illegible] or as the most semi-transparent materials are the preferred ones, and there are some charming little slips in delicate colorings to be worn beneath. One can purchase ready-made slips in China silk for a mere trifle, but the fastidious will much prefer to have such made from the chiffon double or chiffon cloth, as it is called—and just as carefully fitted to the figure as a skilled dressmaker can manage.

The more expensive the blouse, the better it clings to the figure. There is absolutely no puffing or sagging at the waist, no "pouch" above the belt, in the latest French productions. In many of them the pleats that are necessary to confine the fullness at the waist are made after the manner of darts and the material cut away beneath so that every unnecessary inch of bulk or [illegible] is done away with.

In all manner of waists the yoke is making itself quite conspicuous. It appears in [illegible] in lace, in chiffon, in silk, and usually it is of the shallowest in the front and back, and so built as to extend well over the sleeve seam on the shoulders, and so aid in the broad boulder line that is so flattering to the [illegible] size of one's waist.

In Lace Melange.

There are so many niches in even the best-equipped wardrobe that the lace blouse alone can fill that the reason for its vogue is not far to seek. The fancy for a combination of two or more laces in the one design still continues, the genres being pretty well contrasted. The laces, however, must be carefully chosen, else the result would be one suggestive of bargain-counter forays and remnant finds. Where at all possible, such little blouses are best fashioned by hand, and faggoting and fancy lace stitches used to join the different strips. In the picture the yoke is made of a sprigged Valenciennes joined with a Cluny beading, while braid Cluny is alternated with an appendail for the body of the blouse. The short sleeve is of the same material, and bias bands of white satin overlaid with a narrow edging serve to give a little touch of character between the [illegible] is a [illegible] and effectively on the front, and the [illegible] is usual, in the [illegible]

The Problem of Living on Half a Million a Year

Once You Establish a Standard You Will Find It No Easy Matter to Make Ends Meet --- Where the Money Goes --- Inside View of the Menages of Some Wealthy New Yorkers

From the New York Times.

It is quite as difficult a problem for some people to live on $500,000 a year as it is for others to make both ends meet on $2,500 or less. A fashionable and wealthy architect declares that it was impossible for any one to keep up appearances in New York on less than $50,000 a year; that this necessitated absolute poverty for a single man; and he should know, as he was not exaggerated. To be anybody in New York society is out of the question unless a family has a town house, a country seat, a villa at Newport or Bar Harbor, or a lesser fashionable resort, a yacht, a garage of motors, a well-equipped stable, a private car and a hunting box somewhere in the Carolinas or in Georgia. To this others add a camp, and all that it implies, in the Adirondacks, an apartment in Paris, and a town house in London, with the possibility of another house at Cowes for the yachting, and still another at Aiken for the winter.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, one of the wealthiest widows in America, maintained in England last year no less than five establishments with an army of servants, and shut up, not close, her house at Chicago. William K. Vanderbilt has his country seat at Oakdale, where, whether he is there or not, there must be kept a corps of employes of all kinds; his town house, which is never left completely vacant, his villa near Versailles, and his hotel in Paris.

Servants Transferred From House to House.

In many families the servants are transferred from town to country seat, to Newport or elsewhere, as the season demands. In other families new sets of servants are engaged for the country and Newport seasons, under the direction of an older servant or with the addition of a few of the regulars of the household. In fact, a caterer at Newport is known to supply for an entertainment not only the waiters for the supper room, but butlers and maitres d'hotels for occasions. There are several French boarding houses in Newport where such functionaries go and pass the summer, and make a handsome living by these odd jobs. Their prices vary for the services of a single evening, sometimes they soar as high as $50.

Yet, with all this most necessary expenditure, there are different methods of living among these millionaires themselves, who are divided into sets or classes. There are those who have had their wealth for at least three or more generations, and who are either descended from or allied with the old Dutch and Knickerbocker families, now called indiscriminately Knickerbockers; others whose money has been of much more recent origin, and others again who are not New Yorkers, but who have made their fortunes in other cities and whose ambition is to be prominent in New York society.

Like a Lottery.

This society is like a lottery. There are those within the gates who do not spend fabulous amounts on their households, but who do not do things even better than others on a comparatively modest expenditure, and others again who be compelled to resort to spectacular efforts with vast outlays of money in order to establish themselves. To the young girl who is launched into society it is a matter of life and death, and the question of how much it costs is a puzzling one to grapple with comfortable bank accounts and the only fortune available is that of beauty.

Here is the entrance of a young fashionable couple into housekeeping. [illegible] year; a house, [illegible] $6 a [illegible] $50 for Six Months.

[illegible] A Few Things Not Included.

[illegible] the servants [illegible] and his wife, the servants [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] of the [illegible] There is the yacht with its crew [illegible] and the steward and [illegible] another cook and assistants [illegible] and [illegible] have come to electric [illegible] and there is a resident engineer with an assistant.

The first position today in a multimillionaire's household is that of a steward and chamberlain of the chambers, several of whom have made great successes in this line. One of these, William Hugh Nelson, who was prominent in New York and Philadelphia society, manages for Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel, lately entertained Prince Louis and Prince Alexander of Battenberg, living the latter as a resident [illegible] one week. Mr. Nelson is not the secretary. He is virtually the head of the household department. He has his suite of rooms and naturally is as much of the family. He plans all entertainments, and has direct supervision over the entire establishment. He frequently leads the cotillions, and he generally accompanies Mr. and Mrs. Drexel to Europe on their annual trips, returning before them so as to have either the town or Newport house ready for them. Mrs. Drexel entertains lavishly. There are at least twenty-four servants in the house, and on reception days there are from four to eight footmen in the Drexel livery standing in the hall.

Each Has Her Own Duties.

The chef has a full force, and there is a separate cook for the servants' hall. The butler maid arranges the flowers in the drawing room, dusts the ornaments, but never goes beyond the dressing. The chambermaids have their [illegible] and the ladies' [illegible] maid is [illegible] in hers. The maid to the mistress of the house is a confidential servant, who must be most tactful and clever. She has to be trustworthy to a degree. In her charge are the jewels, and it is she who puts them in the safe in madam's apartments and takes them out again when required. She superintends the cabins of her mistress and brings her the light breakfast in the morning in her apartments, and is the first servant to leave her at night. She travels with her everywhere.

Where there are young daughters there are frequently several maids. Some wealthy women are opposed to this, and Mrs. Vanderbilt would never allow her eldest daughter, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, a maid until she grew up. But, then, she has practically none, and the Misses Vanderbilt, with all their wealth, were brought up very simply. When there are young children, there are governesses, both English and nurses, and nurses. As a young baby at home and goes abroad, these persons must be trustworthy, and they command high salaries. There is also a social secretary, generally a young gentlewoman in straitened circumstances, who attends to the correspondence, the invitations, keeps up the visiting list, interviews all annoying visitors, attends to the charities, and has also to be on the alert when that most intruder on all households makes its call known—the irrepressible telephone.

The Question of Wages.

The wage list of servants is a serious one. However, many are glad to serve in well-known fashionable houses for the sake of the advertisement it brings, and it is astonishing how managing housekeepers in a few of the millionaire households can secure servants, who pose afterward as coming from such and such a family. A western woman recently hired a maid, who asked a comparatively modest sum for her services. The girl had a reference from the housekeeper of one of the most prominent women of Newport and in fact. The woman in New York [illegible] for the position of housekeeper [illegible] the girl started at this [illegible] but was found to be [illegible]

Many [illegible] who come from Newport [illegible] reading far beyond their means. The [illegible] wages of servants and the [illegible] be employed and maintained, [illegible] of keeping up different establishments, [illegible] stable, garages, and [illegible] the amount expended [illegible] training and living [illegible] which only a few [illegible]

The Art of Storytelling

Sir Richard Steele.

I HAVE often thought that a story teller is born, as well as a poet. It is certain that some men have such a peculiar cast of mind that they see things in another light than men of grave dispositions. Men of lively imaginations and a partial temper will represent things to their hearers in the same manner as they themselves were affected with them; and whereas serious spirits might perhaps have been disgusted at the sight of some odd occurrences in life, yet the very same circumstances shall diverse them in a well-told story, who from the disagreeableness of the images are transported at those same will be as pleasantly entertained in the [illegible] Story telling [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

TOBACCO KILLS MICROBES.

Comfort to Know That Smoke Is Prevention of Disease.

From the Chicago Chronicle.

Lovers of tobacco in its various seductive forms who have been at times a trifle conscience smitten by reason of the alleged deplorable effects of the tobacco habit upon the mind and body, should henceforth be able to smoke their pipes in peace, since no less an authority than the London Lancet, the foremost journal of the medical world, has risen up to declare in the most deliberate and positive way that tobacco smoke contains an appreciable amount of formaldehyde, one of the most powerful antiseptics and "germ killers."

It is because of the presence of this chemical agent in tobacco smoke that users of the weed are largely immune, it is said, from certain dread diseases of the throat, lungs and nasal passages. The reasoning, which seems to be quite conclusive, is that the smoke, passing through the mouth and nose, effectually disposes of the microbes constantly deposited there and thus supplies the needful once of prevention for many diseases.

While one part of formaldehyde in 10,000 parts of water is sufficient to destroy all bacterial life, the amount of the poison found in tobacco smoke is so infinitesimal that it has no injurious effect upon the human organism.

THE COPPER AGE.

From the New York Sun.

Twenty-five years ago the United States produced 27,000 tons of copper. The production during 1905 was practically 400,000 tons, or more than half of the world's total supply. The value of last year's output may be given as $160,000,000.

The uses of this metal are steadily growing. It is estimated that by 1920 the requirements of the world will reach 1,500,000 tons. The United States will probably hold its present place in the market. New deposits are opened from time to time. There are known districts yet undeveloped in the western mountains and Alaska is rich in copper. Mexico and Canada are copper countries and send the United States ore and matte for smelting and pigs, bars and ingots for manufacture.

The increasing supply of the metal promises to keep prices within reasonable bounds while the increasing demand fairly assures ample profits to the owners of copper properties. No available substitute has yet been found for its use for electrical purposes, and the employment of electricity increases from year to year. The day of copper has come, and there is every reason to believe it will be a long day.

CURIOUS PHASES OF LAWS.

Treatment of Murderers in France and in Other Countries.

From Pearson's Weekly.

The recent murder of Senor Balmaceda, secretary to the Chilean legation in Brussels, by Luiz Waddington, son of the Chilean minister, again directs attention to one of the many laws that are sadly in need of alteration.

It will be remembered that Waddington, after firing five shots at his sister's betrothed, ran at full speed to the Chilean legation, which stands close to Senor Balmaceda's house, and took refuge there. In consequence of this action the police have no power to enter the building and arrest the murderer, for the legation is considered to be foreign territory and therefore inviolable. The murderer is thus able for the time to snap his fingers at the law and the police.

Even had the crime been committed in this country our authorities would have been just as helpless, for, as the law runs, the official residences of the representatives of foreign countries are exempt from the jurisdiction of the country in which they stand and local authorities have no right to enter them under any circumstances.

Murderers May Go Free.

Once a murderer is captured in this country he may be tried for his crime, no matter how long he has escaped the arm of justice, but in France this is not so. There if a murderer is not discovered and brought to trial within fifteen years he may go free as the most crimeless citizen. Only the other day a man who had committed a murder twenty-five years ago wrote defiantly to the police, confessing the crime and giving his address in Paris. Investigation proved his story to be true, yet the police were prevented by the law from arresting and punishing him.

The man who fails to raise his hat when a funeral is passing becomes liable by an old law of Chester to be taken before a magistrate and imprisoned.

A stupid law in France is that a husband can not charge his wife with any criminal offense. (A dramatic incident recently exposed the opportunities the law provides for the criminally inclined.

M. Binet a few months ago became so infatuated with a young woman he met by chance that he begged her to marry him. On the day of the ceremony the delighted bridegroom gave a dinner in a well-known Paris restaurant. After the dinner came the ball, and then M. Binet took home his bride.

No sooner had they entered the house, however, than she removed her white veil and orange blossoms and, suddenly becoming deathly pale, gasped: "A doctor, a doctor." In less than a quarter of an hour a doctor returned in a cab with the horrified bridegroom. Judge of their surprise when the two men discovered that the bride had disappeared, taking with her a sum of 1800 which M. Binet kept in an escritoire. On rushing immediately to the local police magistrate he received the cold comfort that, as he had married the lady he could not according to the law take any proceedings against her.

TONNAGE FOR SEPTEMBER WILL SHOW BIG INCREASE

CRIPPLE CREEK, Sept. 1.—The gain in values of ore treated by the plants of the U. S. R. & R. Co. in August over July almost compensated for the loss by the smelters, but not quite. Consequently the total figures for the month of August show a diminution in dollars, although a slight gain in tonnage.

It had been known for some time that the tonnage of ore being hauled last month was heavy, probably considerably in excess of that for July. Disappointing averages were caused by the increase in the haulage to the Cyanide mills, and it is plain that several operators are paying particular attention to the milling of their lower grade deposits.

This is a hopeful sign, however, and it is certain that the tonnage for September will be augmented by several potent causes. At least two new cyaniding plants will be in operation during September, with two more to follow in October and November. This phase of the mining industry is receiving more and more attention with each succeeding year in Cripple Creek, as it deserves to do, and while as yet it cuts an inconsiderable figure in the grand total each month, there are not lacking those who are willing to lay a wager that by the time the drainage tunnel is completed there will be at least 1,000 miners engaged in the extraction of ore for cyaniding purposes alone.

The Santa Rita mill was handicapped materially last month by the drowning out of its mine early in the month. This mishap served Messrs. Gelm & Clay, lessees so badly that they have not been able as yet to resume operations. It is calculated that September will see the plant operating nicely again. It is capable of treating fifty tons of ore per day, and the grade of the ore is quite high. In fact, a strike of $30 are amenable to cyanidation has been made there recently.

It is announced from headquarters of the Wishbone Mining and Milling company, who have erected an elaborate plant on the north slope of Carbonate hill, one and one-half miles north of this city, that ore treatment will begin next week at the rate of 100 tons daily. The Pony gulch mill is at last, if not completed and while twice as far from the present producing district of the Wishbone it is promised that this company has an ore body which will result ultimately in the extension of the camp to its property.

The industry of ore hauling to Iaeger has grown to enormous proportions, during the last two months and considerable ore is going by this means to the newer cyaniding plants. The Colorado Trading and Transfer company is now using at this time some 150 horses in transporting ore from the slightly isolated mines to the nearest railroad point, in no instance over one mile distant.

The smelters in Aug ust [illegible] short of their record for July when the U. S. R. & R. Co. [illegible] a gain of $115,000. The cause of the apparent inconsistency is [illegible] probably to be found in [illegible] ment resulting from [illegible] chase by the American Smelting & Refining company of a [illegible] stock in the United States Reduction and Refining company.

Carpenter work on the [illegible] mill of 250 tons capacity [illegible] has begun in earnest. [illegible] Tuesday morning. [illegible] 100 to 125 Pine St.

UNCOVERS SIXTY-OUNCE ORE AT SHALLOW DEPTH

MAKE GOOD FIND BEYOND THE RIM

ROCK ASSAYING $165 A TON IS FOUND NORTH OF VICTOR, OUTSIDE OF DISTRICT PROPER.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Sept. 1.—For the past several months reports borne out by high assays, have been coming into Victor and Cripple Creek of good finds of ore beyond the rim of the district. Ever since the Cripple Creek camp was out of its swaddling clothes men have been following good-looking veins outside of the prescribed gold-producing area, commonly called the Cripple Creek district. These prospectors have worked singly for years and apparently their expectations are being realized.

The latest strike, and one that appears to be bona fide, is just learned of through Louis Berglund, who has been working for several years on the North Morning Star ground, near Edlaw station, on the Short Line railroad, a few miles from Victor. Berglund brought in some good-looking rock to have assayed, but which did not show any sylvanite or free or rusty gold on the surface. The rock was assayed and gave returns of $165 to the ton. He declared that he had opened fully three feet of this material and that he had taken samples across the vein.

The vein encountered by Berglund was some distance from the shaft, at a depth of 200 feet. This property is being operated and is owned by Rockford (Ill.) capitalists, who have been contributing money for several years. It looks as if the lockers are soon to be rewarded. One carload of $170 ore will nearly compensate them for their venture. Twelve claims, all adjacent, are owned by the Rockford people.

Sims, Long and company, lessees, who have been operating on the Proper claim of the Stratton estate, on Gold hill, for several months, recently made a strike from which they have sent out several cars that gave satisfactory returns. In an old and abandoned shaft, at 50 feet depth, they opened a streak better than 42 inches wide. They started a short crosscut at a depth of 110 feet and found ore.

SATISFIED AS TO ORE'S VALUE

RUNS 60 PER CENT LEAD, WITH GOOD SILVER VALUES. STREAK FOUR FEET WIDE.

GEORGETOWN, Colo., Sept. 1.—Mr. Maxwell, lessee of the Lebanon mine, previously [illegible] several cars of ore, [illegible] satisfied himself of its value, the returns having given 60 per cent lead with good silver values. This [illegible] from No. 3 tunnel [illegible] Creek, from one to three feet in width, and has been drifted on over 100 feet. A stope is being started and the drift continued. The ore taken out during these operations is being stored and will be shipped when a good tonnage is on hand.

The want of good ventilation in the [illegible] is severely felt, working with [illegible] but when the noise being [illegible] is completed there will be a [illegible] condition of the atmosphere throughout the mine.

The Lebanon, which has been idle for [illegible] years, is one of those properties which can be worked at a minimum [illegible] having its own water power [illegible] a cheap fuel of easy grade [illegible] to Georgetown. Mr. Maxwell [illegible] advantage of the situation [illegible] the water power running the [illegible] and operating pumps [illegible]

CALEY WILL SOON BE REIMBURSED

CRIPPLE CREEK, Sept. 1.—Frank Caley, who has expended a good many thousands of dollars on the Anaconda claim of the Jerry Johnson group, on Gold hill, is soon to be reimbursed. Mr. Caley sunk the shaft to the 400-foot level [illegible] during the past year. During the past few days Mr. Caley has opened a body of [illegible] which bears [illegible] Several [illegible] with the [illegible] Mr. Caley [illegible] Jerry Johnson [illegible] Mr. Caley [illegible] Jerry Johnson [illegible] Mr. Caley [illegible] Jerry Johnson
